Opinions of the Press.

Slater's Royal National Commercial Directory of Yorkshire, to give the great volume its full title, has just been issued in a tenth edition. If it were not possible to get the work in divisions of Ridings, objection might be taken to the heaviness of the volume for the whole of the county. Seeing the enormous number of names of persons, places, and things to be dealt with in such a work, the absence of serious errors is remarkable. The work also has been brought down as near to date as could be expected in an undertaking of such magnitude. The arrangement is excellent. A new feature is a list of the gentry and private residents in each district. The alphabetical and classified trades lists are convenient. There has evidently been no room for a street list, and to a similar reason we suppose is due the omission of many householders who are employed in offices, shops, &c. A table of contents faciliates greatly a reference to any particular place.—Leeds Mercury.

The tenth edition of this useful tome has just been published. It is an improvement on previous editions in several respects. In order to facilitate reference, a table of contents, explaining the order and arrangement of the book is given for the first time, other welcome novelties being a list of the gentry in each place, and alphabetical and classified trades list for every town and district in the county. The whole work bears evidence of great care in its compilation, a cursory examination of its multitudinous pages showing that a remarkable degree of accuracy has been attained, and the publisher is to be congratulated on having succeeded in making "Slater's Directory of Yorkshire" more indispensable than ever to business men in all the three Ridings.—Yorkshire Post.

It has full and accurate information of everybody in the great county, about whom a commercial or business man is likely to enquire. In point of size the directory is about as bulky as that of London.—Eastern Morning News.

It will be welcomed not only by commercial men for the mass of trade information it contains, but by all who are desirous of possessing a book to which they can refer with the certainty of finding whatever they may wish to learn in relation to the public buildings, institutions, magistrates, and public officials of every town in the county.—York Herald.

In addition to good indices, search in the directory is aided by a distinctive colouring and labelling of the margin of the leaves dealing with respective towns, which enables the desired district to be found in a moment. In a volume five inches thick, and containing such a large mass of information, this is a matter of some consequence.—Bradford Daily Telegraph.

Slater's Directories have been long and favourably known, and the name is quite sufficient to many, without any recommendation whatever.—Barnsley Chronicle.

After careful examination and comparison, we are bound to give it the palm as being the most complete directory we have yet seen.—Wakefield Evening Herald.

The reputation of "Slater's," so long established in this line of literature, appears to be well maintained in this most recent production.—Bradford Observer.

Great care has evidently been exercised in its compilation, and the directory should be a vade mecum to all classes of the trading community and others who have frequently to consult a book of the kind.—Barnsley Independent.

The work imparts much interesting information with regard to the county of broad acres and its various centres of industry and population.—North-Eastern Daily Gazette.

Slater's directories have now stood the test of ninety years' experience, and need no further recommendation.—Manchester Guardian.

The work will be found an invaluable and trustworthy guide to business men.—Manchester Examiner and Times.

Though of ponderous proportions, the work is simplicity itself for reference. The minutest hamlet, though hidden from view among the moors and wolds, can be found without difficulty by referring to a well-contrived index. The directory is provided with admirably executed maps.—Manchester Courier.

For the tenth time Mr. Isaac Slater has issued his directory for the whole of the towns and villages of Yorkshire—a gigantic undertaking, carried out with the skill, accuracy, and perfect fidelity which have characterized the productions of the firm for nearly one hundred years. Maps, plans, indexes, and various other excellent arrangements, facilitate easy reference; and the immense book is at once a model of perfect organization.—Manchester City News.

ADDRESS.

—o—

The present is the ELEVENTH EDITION of the Directory of Scotland issued by the Proprietor and Publisher of this work.

Some modifications, suggested by experience and by numerous subscribers, have been introduced in this edition; notably, the lists of the Nobility, Gentry and Clergy, as well as those of the Farmers and Factors. These have been changed from the scattered positions where in other editions they appeared. They are now complete lists, divided into Counties, following the Directory of Glasgow, an arrangement that will, it is hoped, much conduce to simplicity and convenience of reference.

A further alteration which must be referred to, is the placing of the County portion of the Directory before the Cities of Edinburgh and Glasgow. With these exceptions, the volume appears in its well-known form, and includes all the features that have characterised it in the past, and will be found to be not less useful and trustworthy than its predecessors.

The Proprietor has the honour to acknowledge the assistance received from many persons during the compilation of the Directory, and to all such he now offers his sincere thanks.

A CONCISE EPITOME

OF THE

HISTORY OF SCOTLAND.

SCOTLAND is extremely irregular in its figure, and is separated on the S.E. by the Solway Firth and the Cheviot Hills from England. It is so broken up by promotories projecting far into the sea, and by firths, or arms of the sea, deeply indenting the land, that there are few points which are more than forty miles from salt water—a great portion of the interior lying within thirty miles of the sea. A line drawn on the mainland of Scotland, from the most southerly point of the Mull of Galloway, in lat. 54 deg. 38 min. N. to Dunnet Head, its mostly northerly point, in lat. 54 deg. 40 min. 30 sec. is about 280 miles in length. Its breadth is extremely various, in consequence of the deep indentations produced by the firths. Taking the extreme breadth, however, of the solid part of the mainland—viz., from Buchan Ness point, on the Aberdeenshire coast, to Rowanmoan point, on the west coast of Ross-shire, the distance is about 146 miles. In the southern portion of Scotland, from St. Abb's Head, in Berwickshire, to the point of Knapp, in Argyleshire, the distance is about 139 miles; on the other hand, the breadth of the island between some of the firths is very small. Thus, between Alloa, on the Firth of Forth, on the east coast, and Dumbarton, on the Firth of Clyde, on the west coast, the distance is only 32 miles; while from L Broom, on the west coast, to the Firth of Dornock, on the east coast, the breadth is but 24 miles. The superficial contents are computed to be 30,463 square miles, or 19,496,132 statute acres, of which only 4,811,813 are under crop, in the bare fallow, or in grass—that is to say, that about one fourth of the acreage of Scotland is under cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—The earliest mention made of this portion of Britain by any historian is by Tacitus, who flourished about one hundred years after Christ. The original population seems to have consisted of Cimbrians, from the Cimbric Chersonese, the modern Jutland. About two centuries before the Christian era the Cimbrians appear to have been driven to the south of Scotland by the Caledonians, or Picts, a Gothic colony from Norway. Tacitus denominates the country Caledonia; the venerable Bede, who wrote about the year 700, names the country the Province of the Picts; and Alfred the Great, who translated his history into the Anglo-Saxon tongue, about the year 882, called the people Piohts, and the country Piohtland. From the Picts then, or Piohts, probably originates the population of the Lowlands, the Lowlanders having been, in all ages, a distinct people from those of the western Highlands. In the tenth and eleventh centuries, the name of Scotia, previously applied to Ireland, was given to modern Scotland, by which title it is designated by Adam of Bremen. About 258 years after Christ, the Dalraids of Bede, the Attacotti of the Roman writers, passed or re-passed from Ireland into Argyleshire, and became the progenitors of the Scottish Highlanders, who speak the Irish or Celtic language, while the Lowlanders have always used the Scandinavian or Gothic. Fergus I., who is supposed to have reigned about 330 years before Christ, is said to be the founder of the Scottish monarchy. From him, till the year 1006, there are reckoned eighty-two kings; after which, till Britain became subject to one monarch, the succession was as follows:—Malcolm II.; Duncan I.; Macbeath (or Macbeth); Malcolm III.; Donald VII.; Duncan II.; Edgar; Alexander I.; David I.; Malcolm IV.; William; Alexander II; Alexander III; John Baliol; Robert Bruce; Edward Baliol; David II; Robert II.; Robert III.; James I.; James II; James III.; James IV.; James V.; Mary; James VI. In 1603, on the death of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. of Scotland ascended the English throne, and constantly resided in England, he and his successors calling themselves kings of England and Scotland, and each country having a separate parliament, till the year 1707, when, during the reign of Queen Anne, both kingdoms were united under the general name of Great Britain.

SURFACE, CLIMATE, &C.—The most remarkable, and, perhaps, the most distinctive feature of Scotland is her mountains. The principal ones are the Grampian hills, which run from east to west—from near Aberdeen to Cowal, in Argyleshire, almost the whole breadth of the kingdom. Another chain of mountains, called the Pentland hills, runs through Lothian, and joins those of Tweedale. A third, called Lammermuir, rises near the eastern coast, and runs westward through the Merse. Besides the continued chains, among which may be reckoned the Cheviot, or Teviot, hills, on the borders of England, Scotland contains many detached mountains, some of them of stupendous height. Ben Nevis, in Inverness, the highest mountain in Scotland, is 4,370 feet above the level of the sea; Cairngorm, in Banff, Ben Lawers, in Perth, Braerlach, in Aberdeen, and some others, are not much inferior in altitude. The general surface of the country is singularly irregular, being, on the whole, hilly or mountainous, more especially the northern district, which comprehends nearly two-thirds of Scotland, and forms what is called the Highlands, extending from Dumbarton nearly to the extremity of of the island, about 200 miles. Nothing can be more awful to a stranger than the appearance of the Highlands, where dusky mountains rise above each other, and lose their heads in the clouds; while the tremendous rocks fill the mind with dismay, heightened in no small degree by the noise of numberless torrents, which pour down their steep sides. The gloomy vales and glens below—narrow, deep, and dark—add sublimity to the scene. The Lowlands, or that part of Scotland not included within the district of the Highlands, may be said to comprise the portion which lies between the Firths of Tay and Clyde, and extends southward to the English frontier, and nearly the whole of Forfarshire. In this division the proportion of cultivated land is very considerable, exhibiting, in many parts, verdant plains, watered by copious streams, and covered with innumerable cattle; in others, pleasing vicissitudes of gently rising hills and blending vales, waving with corn, well wooded, and interspersed with flowery meadows. Situated in the midst of the ocean, and in a high northern latitude, Scotland cannot boast of a regular climate. It is various, too, in different places; the cold, however, is not so intense as it is in similar latitudes on the continent. The thermometer does not sink so low during the winter as it does in the vicinity of London. Mountainous countries are always most subject to rain; and Great Britain being a sort of inclined plane, gradually declining from west to east, it has been thought that, on this account, the western coast is more wet. This excess of rain is, perhaps, rather owing to the prevalence of the west wind, which brings humidity with it in its course across the Atlantic; hence we find that more rain generally falls at Greenock than at Glasgow, and more at Glasgow than at Edinburgh. As a counterbalance to this, vegetation on the eastern coast is checked during the spring months by cold and piercing east winds. Notwithstanding all this, the air is in general pure and healthy.

The wild animals are the fox, the badger, the otter, the red deer, the wild roe, the hare and the rabbit; besides the wild cat, the hedgehog, weasel, squirrel, mole, &c. There is also proof of others having existed in the country, which are now exterminated, namely, the buffalo, or wild ox, the wolf and the beaver. Of the feathered tribe, pheasants are to be found in the woods, though scarce; also that rare and beautiful bird called capercailzie, or cock of the wood. The ptarmigan, black game and grouse inhabit the healthy mountains; in the valleys are partridges; in the fens, the snipe and plover, and in the plains, most of the English singing birds, except the nightingale.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The country abounds with rivers and lakes, which are in general very pure and transparent, and are well stocked with fish. Most of the rivers have a short course from the mountains to the sea, and are consequently very rapid. The principal are the Tweed, Forth, Clyde, Tay and Spey, of which the Tay is the largest; they all abound with fine salmon and trout. The lakes of Scotland are grand and beautiful, and some of them of considerable extent; their banks are in general clothed with wood, and the scenery is highly picturesque and pleasing. Of these Loch Lomond is the chief, both in extent and beauty, diversified with a number of small romantic woody islands, and begirt with shores in some places decorated with wood, in others naked and majestic. Next to it may be ranked Loch Ness, whose waters never freeze; Loch Tay, Loch Awe, Loch Katrine, Loch Earn, Loch Leven and many others are deserving of the traveller's attention. It is worthy of remark that the name of loch or lake is given, on the western coast, to many inlets or arms of the sea. Throughout the whole extent of coast there are fine fisheries. RAILWAYS, &C.—This northern portion of the United Kingdom has successfully emulated the more southern, its facilities of intercommunication with various distant districts—River, Road, Canal and Rail—lending their respective aids to effect the accomplishment of this great object; and this last-named has of late years taken a most prominent and valuable part in this department of the "country's good," by opening up a rapid means of intercourse with almost every part of the country. It would be superfluous to give here a list of the railways in operation and progress, every place visited by a line being specially noticed throughout the work.

COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—Scotland produces many valuable articles of commerce; beside the trade in corn, the rearing of black cattle and sheep for the English market is very considerable. Great attention is paid to the breed of black cattle; while the horses and sheep, originally small, now rival those of England. Its woods of oak and fir are considered with proper attention, and made serviceable to the navy. The mines of coal, lead and iron have long been sources of wealth, as have freestone, limestone and slate, which are found in various places, and in great abundance. The manufacture of paraffin and other oils has been introduced into several parts, and bids fair to become one of the staple products of the country. Some attention is also paid to its marbles, which prove little, if at all, inferior in colour or polish to those of Italy. Scotland cannot, at present, exhibit many of the precious metals, though considerable quantities both of gold and silver have at different periods been obtained from her bowels, and it is not improbable that the time may arrive when these treasures will again be laid open. Copper has been discovered in many places, though at present it is nowhere wrought to any considerable extent; but a very rich mine of antimony has been worked, richer, it is believed, than any at present known. Most of the gems and precious stones, with the exception of the diamond, have also been found in Scotland. Manufactures of various kinds are in a very thriving condition. In printed cottons and figured goods, in shawls, &c., it equals those of England; shawls especially, for which, and the manufacture of sewing cotton, Paisley has become highly celebrated; and the glass and stoneware are scarcely surpassed anywhere. In linens, particularly those for the table, Dunfermline has long been famous, whilst for the coarser descriptions Dundee and its neighbourhood are justly celebrated. Manufactures of broad cloth, silks, and gauzes are also upon a respectable footing. The intercourse with England daily becomes more frequent (thanks to the rail), to the mutual advantage of both countries. This has the effect of rendering the manners, dress, and language of both alike, and extinguishing all national prejudice.

The Scots are uniformly sober and frugal; instead of lavishing their gains they are wisely laid by or economically expended to enable them to live in comfort, and make a respectable appearance. Intelligence is more common than in most countries, owing to the number of excellent schools, and the cheapness with which education is acquired; and there are few branches of literature in which the Scotch have failed in attaining a degree of excellence, although they cannot boast of many authors at an early period. Before the abolition of episcopacy, the ancient church establishment was composed of two archbishoprics and twelve bishoprics. The National religion is now Presbyterian, founded on an equality among its pastors. A very influential and numerous body, denominated "The Free Church of Scotland," was constituted in 1843, and the members have been increasing in number from that time. The clergy of Scotland are well educated, and singularly exemplary in their morals. Roman Catholics, of whom the number is not very considerable, are tolerated, as well as Episcopalians, and various dissenters from the Established Church. There are four Universities—that of St. Andrew, founded in 1412; that of Glasgow, founded in 1433; that of Aberdeen, founded in 1500; and that of Edinburgh, founded by James VI. in 1582. Since the union of the two kingdoms, which event took place in 1707, the political government has been the same with that of England; the civil code, however, and the manner of administering justice are different. Of this, and of the principal events which have occurred in Scotland, more particular notice will be taken in the historical description of Edinburgh. Scotland, though neither so rich nor so populous as the southern division of the island, has long borne a name for martial exploits; and of late she has risen to as great eminence in literature and the arts.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATIVE SYSTEM, POPULATION, &c.—The mainland of North Britain is naturally divided into three portions. The extremity is parted from the centre by the Moray Firth, Loch Ness, Loch Lochy, and Loch Linnhe, connected with each other by the Caledonian Canal. The midland portion is again parted from the southern by the Firths of Forth and Clyde, the River Forth, Ben Lomond, and its cognominal lake. These are again unequally subdivided into thirty-three counties, which, in the following table, comprising the sheriffdoms, stewartries, and the bailiewicks, and the chief towns, are arranged according to their situations.

The Parliamentary representation of Scotland, as decided by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, is as follows:—Aberdeenshire and Ayrshire return two members, Lanarkshire six, and the other counties one each, except Clackmannan and Kinross, which jointly send one; same with the shires of Ross and Cromarty, Peebles and Selkirk, and those of Elgin and Nairn; so that the thirty-three counties are represented by thirty-nine members. Edinburgh returns four members. Glasgow seven, Dundee and Aberdeen two each, and Greenock, Paisley and Perth one each. The Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrews return one jointly, as do also those of Glasgow and Aberdeen. The following combined or contributory burghs also send one jointly; making the whole number of representatives seventy-two.

PARLIAMENTARY DISTRICTS OF BURGHS.

ABERDEENSHIRE.

THIS important and extensive county is situated in the north-east part of Scotland, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea; on the south by the counties of Kincardine, Forfar, and Perth; and on the west by Inverness-shire and Banffshire. In form it approaches to that of an oval, the length of which, from north-east to south-west, is about eighty-five miles, and its extreme breadth about forty. It is estimated to comprise 1,970 square miles, or 1,260,625 acres. In point of size Aberdeen ranks as the fourth county, and in population as the third. There is a characteristic difference to be observed in the inhabitants of Aberdeenshire from those of any other county in Scotland. They are in general regarded as an active, vigorous, and enterprising race; and when they emigrate they seldom fail to succeed. The dialect of the inhabitants, too, is peculiar from those of the south of Scotland; and to a stranger's ear appears to be attended with a slow pronunciation and broad accent. On the sea coasts they have a distinct difference of physiognomical appearance from other inhabitants of this country; and attest by this, as well as by their speech, that they are descended from a race which originally came from the northern regions of Europe, and fixed themselves in this part of Scotland.

SOIL, SURFACE, CLIMATE, &c.—Towards the sea the land is fertile, and comparatively level; but a great proportion of the county lies amidst the wilderness of the central Highlands. More than two-fifths of the cultivated land is under grass, another two-fifths being devoted to oats, barley, bere, rye and wheat, whilst less than one-fifth is under potatoes and turnips, the latter being the most important crop, succeeding better in this county than in any other in Scotland. The climate is cold, yet it is less liable to extreme cold than other districts lying further south and inland. The county is popularly divided into five districts, namely:—Mar, the southernmost, comprehends all north of the river Dee, from the sea to the east end of the hill of Benachie; Garioch lies north of the Don, bounded by a ridge of hills beginning near the royal burgh of Kintore; Strathbogie lies to the north-west of Garioch and south-east of the upper part of Mar; Formartine, east of Garioch, and bounded on the south by the river Don, and on the north and east by the Ythan and the North Sea; and Buchan, extending from the Ythan to the Deveron. These five districts are sub-divided into lesser districts or divisions, whose names are generally descriptive of their appearance and situation. The district of Mar, on the confines of the shires of Banff, Inverness, Perth, and Angus, may be considered as the centre of Scotland, being at the greatest distance from the sea in every direction. The appearance of the upper part of the district is wild, rugged and mountainous. Towards the east and north-east the county becomes more level, but is in many places moorish and barren; but the woods, mostly fir, are extensive, producing fine timber. The rivers Don and Dee have both their sources in this quarter. Balmoral, the Highland residence of Her Majesty the Queen, and Abergeldie, the seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this district. From the top of Craigendarroch, there is, perhaps, one of the most grand and picturesque views in Scotland. At the termination of a deep glen in Strathdee is the pass of Ballater, which forms the eastern entrance into the Grampian mountains. The district of Buchan is not so hilly, lying mostly on the east and north coast, but being almost destitute of wood its appearance is bleak and naked; from the quantities, however, of large timber found in many mosses, no doubt can exist of its having once been well wooded. Anciently this extensive domain was the property of the Earls of Buchan, on whose attainder, in 1320, King Robert Bruce divided the land among his adherents. Subsequently the title was revived in the Erskine family, but without a restoration of the lands, and the present Earl has no property in this quarter. The districts of Strathbogie, Garioch, and Formartine are generally well cultivated. On the coast, to the south of Peterhead, is a remarkable natural feature, called the Bullers of Buchan. They represent a large oval cavity, in depth about one hundred feet, formed by the steep rocks. A natural arch opens into the sea at the eastern end, into which boats are sometimes drawn and dashed to pieces. The mountains of greatest altitude and importance in Aberdeenshire are—Ben Macdhui, 4,296 feet; Braeriach, 4,248; Cairntoul, 4,241; Ben-a-Bourd, 3,924; Ben Avon, 3,843; Lochnagar, 3,786; Morven, 2,954; Buck of Cabrach, 2,368; Tap o' Noth, 1,852; and Benachie, 1,696.

COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—The making of linen and sail-cloth has been successfully introduced in several parts, the other branches being the manufacture of flax, cotton and woollens, paper and envelope making, tanning, distilling, and the curing of fish and provisions. Shipbuilding, both wood and iron, is carried on at Aberdeen, Peterhead, and Fraserburgh. The sea coast abounds in fish of great variety and richness, and the river and sea fishing, together, form a great source of wealth to the inhabitants. The herring fishery is prosecuted on a very extensive scale at Peterhead and Fraserburgh, the harbours of these places during the fishing season being crowded with boats, which has the effect of considerably augmenting the population; of recent years the herring fishery has also been largely pursued at Aberdeen. Peterhead is also engaged in whale and seal fishing, the former being carried on in summer off the north-east of Greenland and in Davis Straits. Granite—grey, blue, and red, is a valuable and extensive production of this county, and presents an article of considerable traffic, many thousand tons being conveyed to London, and other distant parts, for paving and building purposes, and for monuments, tombs, statues, &c.; it is chiefly found in the neighbourhoods of Aberdeen, Peterhead, New Pitsligo, and Monymusk. Slate is also quarried from the Foudland Hills, Insch. Other minerals are found in different parts of Aberdeenshire, and are eminently worthy of notice. In the parish of Old Machar was discovered a valuable mine of manganese; Leslie produces amianthus, made by the peasants into snuff boxes and ornaments; plumbago has been found on the banks of the Deveron; and near Peterhead, onyx pebbles are to be met with. The largest rock crystal ever found in Scotland was discovered upon the estate of Invercauld in this county; its size was nearly that of a child's body at the age of four years. On the same estate have also been obtained amethysts and aqua-marines, equal in colour and hardness to those so eagerly sought after in the East. Topazes of great value, provincially called Cairngorm stones, are also to be met with in Aberdeenshire. Talc, mica, asbestos, and amianthus, commonly called mountain cork, and mountain leather, are found in several of the hills. At Craig, in the district of Strathbogie, there is a fine flaxen asbestos, both green and white. The county produces plenty of game, black and red cattle, deer, sheep, horses, &c. A very great proportion of the landholders reside permanently or occasionally on their estates, and countenance by their presence many valuable improvements. The rearing of plantations and fences, the introduction of superior breeds of cattle, and better modes of agriculture, have for some time engaged their attention, to the manifest advantage of the district.

RIVERS AND SPRINGS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers of Aberdeenshire are the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, the Ugie, and the Deveron. These rivers are of great value, from the immense quantity and fineness of the salmon they produce; but are too rapid to admit of navigation to any great extent. The river Ythan deserves particular mention on account of the pearl fishery, formerly carried on in it with great success. On the Don are seen the princely ruins of Kildrummy Castle, an ancient seat of the Earls of Mar. The Dee runs through the vale of Strathdee, surrounded by awful fronts of lofty mountains. At the top of the vale of Braemar, a short way above Mar Lodge, is the noted waterfall called the Linn of Dee. In the valley of Glenmuick there is likewise another picturesque cascade, and a little below, on the southern banks of the Dee, most romantically situated, are Pannanich Wells, much frequented in summer. On the sea shore are several remarkable caves, curious pectorations in the rocks, and echoes which reverberate sounds with wonderful distinctness. The main line of railway intersecting Aberdeenshire is the Great North of Scotland and its numerous branches.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This county contains eighty-five parishes and three royal burghs—Aberdeen, Kintore, and Inverurie. The contributory boroughs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in Parliament) belonging to this county are Inverurie, Kintore, and Peterhead. The city of Aberdeen returns two members—William A. Hunter, Esq., LL.D., barrister, London, representing the Northern Division, and Jas. Bryce, Esq., Professor of Civil Law at Oxford, the Southern Division. The county also sends two members, the gentleman representing the Eastern Division being Peter Esslemont, Esq., Aberdeen; Dr. Robert Farquharson, of Finzean, sitting for the Western Division. The Lord Lieutenant is the Earl of Aberdeen. The county of Aberdeen in 1871 contained a population of 244,603, and in 1881, 267,990, exhibiting an increase over 1871 of 23,387. The parliamentary constituency of the Eastern Division of the county in 1887-8, was 11,670, that of the Western Division being 9,951. The valuation of the county (exclusive of railways) was, in 1887-8, £881,156, and the valuation of railways, £48,728.

ABERDEEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF OLD MACHAR AND NIGG, AND THE VILLAGES OF WOODSIDE AND CULTS.

ABERDEEN, the capital of the county to which it gives name, is the chief seaport in the north of Scotland, and the fourth Scottish town in population, industry, and wealth. It is 117 miles N.E. from Edinburgh, and 542 from London; and by means of its rail communication it possesses easy access to any part of the United Kingdom. Aberdeen is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been known to the Romans by the name of Devanha. It is probably among the earliest of the burghs in Scotland found entitled to any royal marks of distinction; and from various circumstances occuring in history, it is reasonable to presume that at a very early period it was a place of some commerce. As far back as 1153, it seems to have been known as such to the Normans; and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce it is observed that in the year 1179, Estyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast. In early times Aberdeen was frequently visited by royalty; and it appears that King William, surnamed the Lion, had an edifice for his occasional residence here, which was situate at the lower side of the town, near the east end of what is called the Green, and was dignified by the title of Palace. This edifice was afterwards bestowed on the monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland. The first charter that was obtained by Aberdeen is supposed to have originated about the year 1179, and was granted by King William. It confirmed to the burgesses the power of enjoying their trade of merchandise as freely, quietly, fully, and honourably as their ancestors did in the time of David, his grandfather; this charter was dated at Perth, and is still preserved in the city archives. King William afterwards granted two other charters; both of these, which were dated at Aberdeen, are still in a good state of preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland, in green wax, appended to each. The city received many subsequent royal charters. The great charter was granted by Charles I. and is dated at Oatlands, 1638; all previous charters are by it confirmed. This charter was subsequently ratified by Parliament. The burgh records are the oldest of any Scottish burgh; they begin in 1398, and are complete to the present time, with only a short break from 1413 to 1433. The city was burned by Edward III. in 1336, but it was soon rebuilt and extended, and called New Aberdeen. In 1497 a blockhouse was built at the harbour mouth, as a protection against the English. During the religious struggles in the seventeenth century between the Royalists and Covenanters, the city was plundered by both parties. In 1715 Earl Marischal proclaimed the Pretender at Aberdeen, and in 1745 the Duke of Cumberland resided a short time in the city. Her present Majesty Queen Victoria has visited Aberdeen on more than one occasion, and owing to her residence at Balmoral, in the Deeside Highlands (50 miles distant), many of the inhabitants have benefited by her patronage.

Aberdeen is pleasantly situated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, and is an elegant and well-built town, being called "The Granite City," on account of its native light-grey granite being the material chiefly employed in building. The new streets are spacious and uniform, and there are many fine public buildings. A noble street, named Union street, running to the west, is particularly handsome. About the middle of this fine street a magnificent granite bridge, designed by Telford, of one arch, spanning one hundred and fifty feet, is thrown across a ravine through which runs a brook called the Denburn. The Denburn is now arched over, and the Great North of Scotland railway runs over it for a short distance. The Joint Railway Station (for the Great North of Scotland, Caledonian, and Deeside railways) is a large and prominent building in Guild street, with a segmental arched iron and glass roof. The exterior has a fine appearance, and the whole is well and substantially built. It was designed by Mr. Smith, the city architect. The modern part of the town has been all built within the last sixty years, and is of very considerable extent. Besides Union street, there are three other fine streets, namely, King street, Market street, and George street, and for some time past the city has been extending in every direction, particularly to the west and north-west, and many suburban villas recently erected are noticeable for their picturesque and effective treatment of the native granite. In Castle street stands a highly-finished statue of George, the fifth and last Duke of Gordon, erected by the gentlemen of the county. It is executed in granite, and represents his grace in a martial cloak, with head uncovered, one foot placed upon a cannon, and both hands resting on a sword. The pedestal is a square slab of granite, and the height of the whole is about twenty feet. At the corner of Union terrace, near Union Street bridge, is a bronze statue of the late Prince Consort, by Marochetti, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite. Further along Union terrace, and in an angle formed by its junction with the Rosemount viaduct, stands a colossal statue of Wallace, in bronze, by W. G. Stevenson, A.R.S.A. It is sixteen feet in height (the largest in Scotland), and was erected by means of a bequest (£3,000) left by Mr. John Steell, of Edinburgh. It was unveiled on the 29th of June of the present (1888) year by the Marquis of Lorne, who on the occasion was presented with the freedom of the city. A bronze statue of General Gordon ("The Hero of Khartoum"), executed by the late T. Stuart Burnett, A.R.S.A., and cast in Sir John Steell's foundry, Edinburgh, stands in the square in Schoolhill, in front of Robert Gordon's College. The monument, which was subscribed for pricipally by members of the clan Gordon, stands nine feet six inches in height, and is placed on a granite pedestal nine feet high. It was unveiled by the Marquis of Huntly, as head of the clan, on the 16th June, 1888. A fine statue of the Queen in white marble, on a polished Peterhead granite pedestal, used to stand in Union street, immediately opposite Market street, but, getting impaired by the weather, was removed to the corridor of the Town House. It is an excellent likeness, and was executed by the late Alexander Brodie, of Aberdeen. In the Town House is a marble statue of Provost James Blaikie, by Sir John Steell; also a bust of John Phillip, the painter (an Aberdonian), by his friend and fellow-townsman, the late William Brodie, R.S.A.

The new Municipal and County Buildings and Court House are situated in Castle street and Union street, and form a most imposing and magnificent structure. They comprise all the offices required for municipal purposes, also a noble hall and Court House. The entrance to the municipal portion is by the door in the base of the tower facing Union buildings. A broad circular stone staircase of easy ascent leads to the Council Chamber, the rooms set apart for the officials, and other apartments. On reaching the first landing, a lobby to the left leads to the Council Chamber, possessing a fine oak roof with the armourial bearings of eminent Aberdonians, &c.; on the walls are hung several valuable paintings, including one of Prince Albert, by John Phillip, portraits of ex-Provosts, by Pickersgill, R.A. and George Reid, R.S.A., and other works of art. The Committee room is entered from the same lobby, and is a square apartment, larger in proportion to its use than the Council Chamber. Above the mantel piece is a mirror in a panel of carved oak, with the arms of the town on the top, which stood in the old Council Chamber. The Provost's room is a commodious apartment, looking into Broad street. The Town Clerk's room has much the appearance of an advocate's office, as has also that of his assistants, which contain a number of old trophies of the city, not altogether devoid of interest. In the upper floor are the apartments of the Town House keeper, and a number of rooms for general purposes. There are to be seen in the building an ancient coat of mail, said to have been worn by Robert Davidson, Provost of the city, at the battle of Harlaw; also the axe of the machine known as "The Maiden," which was used towards the close of the sixteenth century for the decapitation of criminals. The Court House is situated in the centre of the north-east portion of the building, and is thus removed from the noise of street traffic. The public entrance is by the doorway in the centre of the building in Castle street. The entrance hall is very lofty, and has a groined freestone roof and elaborately carved gorbal terminations. The staircase leads by an easy flight to the main corridor, or Court Hall, and then divides into two side flights which lead up to the joint Town and County Hall, which is situated in the centre of the building facing Castle street. This hall is of large size, and is frequently used for fashionable assemblies, art exhibitions, and the like. On the walls are hung several portraits, among which may be mentioned those of Queen Victoria, Queen Anne, the Premier Earl of Aberdeen, and George, last Duke of Gordon. At its east end is the ordinary County Hall (for the meeting of Commissioners of Supply, &c.), almost identical in size and position with the Council Chamber, and decorated in a novel style from a design by Mr. Clyne, a local architect. The ceiling of the staircase, which measures about 35 feet square, is panelled with pitch pine. Light is admitted by three lofty windows on each side. The Court-room is situated on the east side of the main corridor, which is connected with the first landing. The room is 51 feet in length by 39 feet in breadth, and 33 feet in height. At the west end is a small gallery, access to which is had by two narrow staircases entering from the corridor. The accommodation provided for the public seats about 300 individuals. The whole room has been finished in a most artistic manner, and presents a pleasing appearance to the eye. Access may be had by seven different entrances. On the left of the corridor on entering is a staircase which leads up to a suite of rooms set apart for the procurators fiscal and their clerks, a small Court-room for the trial of summary cases, hearing proofs, examining bankrupts, &c. At the end of the corridor is a passage leading to the Advocates' buildings. A passage to the right leads to the corridor of the east-ward entrance to the building, immediately under the old tolbooth tower built during the first quarter of the 17th century.

The latest additions to the architecture of Union street are the large new block of buildings for the Free Press offices and the new branch office for the Commercial Bank. The Free Press Building is situated on the north side of the street near the Municipal Buildings, the front looking south, and is isolated on the east and west sides from the adjoining buildings in the street; it extends backwards to the Nether Kirkgate, being, in fact, exposed all round. The handsome front is designed after the classical Renaissance style, and the accessories are richly emphasised in moulded and carved work of the most advanced artificers' craftmanship, and executed in the beautiful, sparkling, and delicately tinted grey granite of the Aberdeen quarries. The principal doorway, with its elaborately worked festooned trusses supporting the rich massive door cap and balustrade above; the window enrichments and caps; and the boldly-cut main cornice with tryglyphs and ornamental plaques, &c. form the most noticeable features of interest and finish. The architects are Messrs. Ellis & Wilson, of Aberdeen. The new bank, on the same side of Union street, and near the house forming the south-west corner of St. Nicholas street, is chiefly noticeable for its novelty in design, being of a late domestic type of pointed architecture, showing mullioned windows and heads filled in with flowing tracery, the crowning feature consisting of a steeply pointed stepped gable and pinnacles raised above the masonry of the rest of the houses near by. The masonry of the front is built of narrow flat courses of granite, the dressings being in light granite, and the filling in of the warm pink tinted Corennie granite; the front only is exposed. The architect is Mr. Sydney Mitchell, of Edinburgh.

The Post Office is at the foot of Market street, and was erected in 1876 to take the place of the old one erected in 1845, which, since the transfer of the telegraphs, had been found far too limited for the despatch of the business, now rapidly expanding year by year. It is a handsome building of white Kemnay granite, and consists of a basement, partly underground, and two storeys above the street level. The two principal elevations, facing Market street and Trinity quay, are designed in the Renaissance style. The chief elevation, fronting Market street, is rounded off at the two extreme corners, which contain doorways with carved consoles and moulded cornices; and the centre division, containing the chief entrance, projects slightly in advance of the remaining portion. The architect for the building was Mr. R. Matheson, and the contractors Messrs. Coutts & Sons, of Aberdeen.

The Music Hall Buildings, in the west of Union street, are the property of the Aberdeen Music Hall Company, Limited. This elegant edifice (which formerly constituted the County Buildings) is decorated with a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height. The principal entrance, under the portico, leads into an outer vestibule, having a flight of six steps conducting to the inner vestibule, which is sixty feet in length and twenty feet in breadth, and is divided into three compartments by fluted Ionic columns, with ornamented capitals and corresponding pilasters. The centre part is thirty-two feet high, and the ceiling is a dome, finished with coffering. In the middle of the building, and opening into the ball room, through a screen of columns, is a spacious corridor or promenade, seventy feet in length, finished with pilasters, and an arched and panelled ceiling. It communicates on the one side with the ball room, and on the other with what used to be the supper or refreshment room, and the card saloon, but are now known as the Square Room and Round Room, and are generally used for meetings, lectures, and the like. Beyond all these rooms is a capacious Music Hall, built by the Company, and opened 14th September, 1859, by the late Prince Consort, who then delivered in it his thoughtful address as president of the British Association. The Hall is furnished with an admirable organ, is well decorated, and is capable of seating about 3,000 people.

The Corn Exchange, in Hadden street, erected in 1854, is the property of a joint-stock company; the cost of erection was about £1,000. It is chiefly used as a public news room; it is furnished with the leading newspapers and magazines of the kingdom, and supplied with telegraphic intelligence, and altogether is one of the best equipped rooms of the kind in the country, the charge of admission being only a penny. The Masonic Hall is in Exchange street; the foundation stone was laid on the 27th of September, 1871. The building contains on the ground floor three shops, the remainder being used exclusively by the Masonic Lodges in Aberdeen (of which there are ten), and embraces a hall 50 feet by 32 feet, and 20 feet high, with a gallery at one end. The hall has three lofty windows to Stirling street, filled with stained glass. The building was designed by Mr. James Matthews; the cost was £2,500, which was defrayed by shares of £1 each. The Market Cross, near the eastern extremity of Castle street, cannot be too highly admired, whether as an architectural object or as an antiquarian curiosity. It is of hexagonal form, with a pillar rising from the centre. In a cornice around the upper part of the structure are twelve compartments for figures, cut in relief; ten of these contain the portraits of Scotch monarchs, the last of the series being James VII., in whose time (1686) the edifice was completed. This fine erection stood originally at the west end of the square in the centre of a raised pavement called the Plainstanes. This pavement was removed, however, in 1842, and the Cross was then placed in its present position. The Market House, known as the New Market, stands in Market street, and is one of the largest and most beautiful buildings of its kind in the kingdom; it was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1842. It was destroyed by fire in 1882, but has since been re-erected on the old lines, with some alterations and improvements. It contains two floors and a continuous gallery all round the building. In the west end of the market is a beautiful fountain of polished Peterhead granite. The theatre is situated in Guild street, adjoining the Imperial Hotel. It is 74 feet 8 inches in length, with a mean depth of 90 feet, and the height of the front is 50 feet from the street. The entrance doors for the public are five in number, all to the front. Commodious refreshment, retiring, and cloak rooms are provided for visitors. The theatre is seated for 1,670 persons. The stage and all its appliances are of the most approved modern description. St. Katharine's Hall, Shiprow, has accommodation for seating 800 persons, and contains various other rooms which are neatly and substantially furnished; added to these is a refreshment bar and dining rooms, with billiards and chess, lavatory, &c. The Barracks, on the Castle hill, are fitted up for the convenience of six hundred men, although, according to the usual mode of military accommodation, they are capable of containing double this number; there is an excellent hospital attached to them on an adjoining eminence. The town is admirably paved with granite, well lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with excellent water, taken from the Dee at Cairnton, about 21 miles above the city. The arrangements for cleansing the streets and watching the city are fully efficient.

The port of Aberdeen is admirably adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of the trade with America. Early in the seventeenth century, a number of ships, of small tonnage, belonged to the port, and a considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In 1656 there were only nine vessels, of the aggregate amount of 440 tons. In 1692 all the shipping was two galliotts of thirty tons each. Soon after this time, however, when the affairs of the country got into a more settled state, shipping, along with general trade, made a considerable progress. In 1788 the number of ships registered was 169, and the aggregate tonnage, 11,820; in 1818, the ships registered were 237; tonnage, 36,471; in 1872, 236 vessels; tonnage, 101,188. The number of vessels, including steamers, registered in the port of Aberdeen in 1881 was 200; tonnage, 109,471. The total number of vessels entered and cleared for British ports in the year 1881 was 3,020; tonnage 705, 660. Of these 1,881 were steamers, with a tonnage of 511,678; 1,139 sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 193,982. From foreign ports there entered 267 vessels; tonnage, 77,325. Of these 152 were foreign vessels, with a tonnage of 38,996; 114 were British vessels, with a tonnage of 38,329. Thirty of the total foreign entries were steamers, with a tonnage of 12,016; 237 were sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 65,309. There sailed for foreign ports during the year 84 vessels; tonnage, 12,291. The vessels on the Aberdeen register in 1884 numbered 193, with a tonnage of 105,321. The number of vessels, including steamers, registered at the port in 1887 was 182; tonnage 110,102. The total harbour revenue for the year ending 30th September, 1881, was £59,320; the portion derived from the shipping and goods, £41,195; while the local salmon fishings (now the property of the harbour commissioners) yielded £5,706. For the year ending 30th September, 1884, the harbour revenue amounted to £59,140, the salmon fishings yielding £5,831. The customs revenue for 1887 amounted to £186,008 7s 11d. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvement in the harbour commenced, there have been expended upon it vast sums. A pier was constructed to the north of the harbour entrance (formed by the river Dee joining the sea), and now extends 2,500 feet seaward. A wet dock of 29 acres, and with 6,000 feet of quays, was completed in 1848, and called Victoria Dock, in honour of Her Majesty's visit to the city in that year. The diversion of the river and the new south breakwater were later undertakings. The first turf cut in the diversion of the river was by Lord Provost Leslie, on the 22nd of December, 1869. The new course is about a mile in length, and forms a large arc of a circle, from the suspension bridge to about opposite Marischal street, and from that point to Torry, where it joins the harbour entrance. The bottom of the new channel is 170 feet wide. The north bank has a gradient of 1 in 3, and the south bank 1 in 10. The new breakwater, the entire length of which is 1,050 feet, is carried out to a depth of water of 50 feet at high tide. Two new quays have since been constructed, named respectively after two provosts—Mr. George Jamieson and Mr. James Matthews; and a new and spacious graving dock was opened in June, 1885. It is situated in what was the old bed of the river Dee, now known as the Albert basin. The length of the floor is 500 feet; the total length of the dock being 524 feet. It is 48 feet wide at the floor, the width gradually widening till it reaches 74 feet at the cope; the depth on the sill is 20 feet. The graving dock is furnished with hydraulic machinery of the latest and most approved type; its total cost was about £50,000. A handsome harbour office, surmounted by a clock tower, for the accommodation of harbour officials, engineers, &c., was erected about the same time on Regent quay, from a design by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects, Aberdeen. The fame of the "clipper bow" so justly due to the shipbuilders here, especially to the late Mr. William Hall, who successfully established his claim to the invention, has spread the fame of Aberdeen shipbuilding to all quarters of the world. In 1881 there were built 10 vessels, aggregate tonnage, 9,837—two sailing vessels and eight steamers; and at the commencement of 1882 nine vessels were on hand—three sailing vessels and six steamers with a total tonnage of 11,290. In 1883 there were launched 16 vessels, with a total tonnage of 11,628; while there were seven vessels on hand, with a gross tonnage of 8,080. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don are, as they have for a long time been, an important branch of industry.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufactures from a very early period. We find Provost Alexander Jaffray, with his co-adjutors, establishing a woollen manufactory in 1636, in the Correction wynd, under a patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges and other coarse cloths." The manufacture of these and of stockings had been cultivated so successfully and extensively for some time, that Sir Patrick Drummond conservator of Holland, remarked that "Scotland was more obliged to the town of Aberdeen for returns of money on its export trade than all other towns in Scotland." Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons, have three establishments—in the Green, at Garlogie Mills, and at Gordon's Mills. Their chief products are carpets, tweeds, hosiery, worsted, and woollen yarns. In addition to the material manufactured on their premises, they give employment to a great number of women over the country by giving out worsted to be knitted into hose. Messrs. Crombie, of Grandholm Mills, are also large manufacturers. The manufacture of winceys seems to have originated with the late firm of Messrs. John Barker & Sons, of Gordon's Mills. It is now successfully carried on by many firms in Aberdeen. The demand still continues to expand, the quality of the Aberdeen fabrics being found very superior. Jute spinning is also carried on by a limited liability company. The only cotton spinning establishment now in Aberdeen is that of Banner Mill, belonging to Messrs. Robinson, Crum & Co. Limited. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1830, by Messrs. Stewart & Rowell, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Mr Stewart and his sons. It is also carried on by Messrs. John M'Pherson & Co. and Messrs. C. Elrick & Co. Limited. Messrs. John Moir & Son; Marshall & Co. Spring garden; J. T. Morton, Rosemount; Gordon & Son, Green; and W. Bruce, Prince Regent street, among other firms, are engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions. All manner of fish, flesh, soups, vegetables, fruits, &c., are preserved in tin cases of all sizes, and every variety of preparation. Messrs. Mitchell & Muil, Limited, biscuit manufacturers to the Queen, have an extensive manufactory here. The extensive paper-works at Stoneywood, carried on by Messrs. Alex. Pirie & Sons, Limited, were established nearly one hundred years ago, and they are the largest manufacturers in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson & Son, Limited, manufacture very extensively wrapping and packing papers of all kinds; they have also a patent for making paper bags, in which they do a considerable trade. There is also a large paper mill at Culter, belonging to a limited liability company. There are several large horticultural builders in Aberdeen. Among the most prominent may be mentioned Messrs. J. Garvie & Sons, and D. Macandrew & Co.; the former have erected hot-houses for Her Majesty at Balmoral. The chemical works at Sandilands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller & Co. in 1848, for the purpose of working up the Gas Company's sliquid products into naphtha, creosote oil, asphalte, sulphate of ammonia, &c. But several branches have been added since, the most important of which are the manufacture of artificial manures, paraffin wax, sulphuric acid, &c. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in Aberdeen by the representatives of John Begg, of the famed Lochnagar Distillery; Messrs. Henry Ogg & Co. of the Strathdee Distillery; and the Bon-Accord Distillery Co. Limited, &c.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and portions of the adjoining districts, are composed of igneous rock of all varieties, the quarrying of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progress till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, destroyed a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed ordaining the outside walls of dwelling houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1764 the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite; but it was not till 1795 that larger blocks were required, and machiery began to be applied. Rubislaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government docks; and Dancing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, supplied granite for the Union Bridge, and the new street extension of the city. Subsequently the demand has considerably increased, as granite is used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks, and other public works. The dockyards of Portsmouth and Sheerness, the docks of many ports along the east coast including those of Newcastle, Hull and Leith, as well as London Bridge, were all formed of Aberdeen granite, and the piers of the Forth Bridge were also made of granite from the quarries belonging to Mr. John Fyfe. There are over 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality. The quantity of stone quarried annually is about 55,000 tons, 40,000 of which is exported chiefly from this port. The trade is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about 500 tons annually. The facilities afforded by the railways in lessening the expense of carriage from the various quarries have tended to increase the demand. Granite polishing has now acquired large dimensions here, and it was calculated that last year (1887) the value of the output in polished granite sent to America alone was about £48,000. About fifty years ago the late Mr. Macdonald was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite. The firm of Messrs. Macdonald, Field & Co. (now Alexander Macdonald & Co. Limited), had the honour to supply the enormous granite sarcophagus (30 tons weight), now containing the remains of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, besides a smaller one for her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. The same firm also manufactured the massive granite sarcophagus in which the remains of Napoleon III. are entombed, and which was presented to the Empress Eugenie by Her Majesty the Queen, and last year a similar tomb also by Messrs. Macdonald & Co. was made to the order of the Empress Eugenie for the remains of the late Prince Imperial. Messrs. William Keith, jun. King street; James Hunter & Son, King street; and numerous other firms do considerable business. The process of all their operations is by steam machinery. Remarkable advances have been made recently in the various mechanical operations. Within the last two years the use of sand for smoothing the surface of the granite, a system that has been in general use from the commencement of the industry, has been almost entirely discontinued and the use of chilled shot adopted instead. In the splitting of the large blocks, also, a method of sawing has latterly been introduced which entails a large saving in labour as well as in material. From 10,000 to 12,000 tons of granite are used annually for polishing purposes at the various works in Aberdeen, consisting not only of the native local rock, but also of granites from the West of Scotland, from Ireland, and from various parts of Germany and Sweden. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general, and monumental purposes are sent from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three joint stock companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials—the Commercial, the Lime, and the Northern Agricultural—each of them having steam mills for pulverising bones. The latter, in addition, carries on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil, &c. Messrs. Ben Reid & Co. have a large establishment for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Messrs. Harper & Co. carry on an extensive business in the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery and wire weaving, especially the construction of wire suspension bridges. There are also brick and tile manufacturing companies, several soap and candle manufactories, coach builders, and many other large establishments, of which our space prevents us from giving details, located here. The iron and metal works employ a large number of skilled workmen. There are several engineering establishments and foundries, with other works connected with shipping, sail and rope works, boiler making, &c., &c. Apart from the import of foreign timber, there is a large business carried on in home-grown wood, from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial.

The earliest banking company formed in Aberdeen was started in 1752. It was begun on a scale which must now be regarded as limited, even for the comparatively moderate requirements of that period, and it was not long ere the scheme was relinquished. In 1766 the "Aberdeen Banking Company" was originated, and long enjoyed almost a monopoly of the banking business of the north. About thirty years ago it was merged in the "Union Bank of Scotland," sinking its individual title. It still maintains a good connection, and continues to do considerable business, both in the town and over the northern district. Besides representatives of most of the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks, there are in Aberdeen two thriving native banks—the Town and County Bank, Limited, established in 1825, having fifty-five branches, and the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, established in 1836, with sixty-four branches. By each of these two establishments (which are both incorporated by Act of Parliament) an extensive business is carried on at their head and branch offices in the city, and through their numerous agencies in the principal towns and villages in the northern counties, as well as in several counties south of Aberdeen. The banking houses in Aberdeen are, on the whole, elegant structures. That of the Town and County Bank occupies an excellent position in the angle formed by the junction of St. Nicholas street with the line of Union street. The North of Scotland Bank occupies a similar position in the corner where the western side of King street joins Castle street. The National Security Savings Bank has been long in operation, and is well patronised by the special class of depositors for which it is intended. Aberdeen is the head station of two highly respectable insurance companies, namely, the Scottish Provincial, established in 1825, and the Northern, established in 1836. The Northern Assurance Company's new offices, erected in 1885, at a cost of £20,000, situated in Union street, at the corner of Union terrace, occupy one of the most prominent sites in the city, and are built entirely of light grey granite in the Italian Renaissance style of architecture, having a frontage to Union terrace of 110 feet, and to Union street of 64 feet. The floors are fire-proof, the interior of the public office being largely decorated with polished granite, in the form of columns, pilasters, wall panels, &c. A striking feature is the largeness of the blocks used in the construction of the building, there being thirty columns, each 18 feet high and 2 wide, the effect of which is to give the building a massive and dignified appearance. The architects were Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, of Aberdeen.

Regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Newcastle, Hull, Glasgow, the Moray Firth, and the Orkneys and the Shetlands, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the south than any other means. In addition to the above, there exist the means of rapid transit by the Caledonian Railway and other lines to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland and the Highland Railways to Wick and Thurso, and the Dingwall and Skye railway to Strome Ferry, in Ross-shire. The Deeside line to Banchory was opened in 1853, and is now extended to Ballater, coaches running in connection with the trains past the Royal residences of Abergeldie and Balmoral to Braemar. Of other conveyances the Directory furnishes full information.

There are several first-class hotels in the city, among which may be mentioned the Imperial, situated in a retired situation in Stirling street, adjacent to the Railway station; it is a neat building in the Venetian-Gothic style of architecture, and internally fitted with all modern requirements essential to a first-class hotel, no expense being spared to render it in all respects equal to any other of the same character. The Palace Hotel, adjoining Union bridge, is most centrally and conveniently situated, and from its elevated and open position commands a fine view of Union street, the chief thoroughfare of the city, and is near the railway station. It is a handsome and commodious building, and one of the largest and best appointed hotels in Scotland. The Douglas in Market street, and Forsyth's in Union street, are also first-class hotels. There are besides many excellent inns, which afford accommodation to various grades of travellers.

The burghal constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four bailies, and a common council, chosen by the Merchant Guild; subsequently this arrangement gave way before the gradual and perfect introduction of a self-electing system. From the year 1817 until 1825 the city revenues were gathered by and dispensed under the control of trustrees. The credit of the burgh may now be considered as good as that of any in the kingdom. The council now consists of a provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a master of shore works, a master of kirk and bridge works, a master of mortification, a master of Guild Brethren Hospital, and twelve councillors. By the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1871," the whole powers and authorities of the formal Commissioners of Police were transferred to the Town Council, and the business of the Police Department is managed by separate committees. By the same Act the undertaking of the former Gas Light Company was also transferred to the Town Council. The boundaries of the municipality were largely extended in 1883, and legislative sanction given to a large scheme of civic improvements, including the formation of an access to the Rosemount suburb. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; and the small debt court on Thursday, during the legal sessions. The city returns two members to Parliament, one for the Northern and the other for the Southern Division; the present representatives are—William A. Hunter, Esq., LL.D., barrister, London, Northern Division, and James Bryce, Esq., professor of civil law at Oxford, Southern Division. The parliamentary constituency for 1887-8 is—Northern Division, 8,350; Southern Division, 7,874. Aberdeen confers the title of earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, which was distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the seventeenth century.

There are seven incorporated trades:—1, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1519; 2, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 5th of August, 1527; 4, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5, the Shoemakers, acknowledged as a corporate body in the years 1484 and 1520; 6, the Weavers, the deacons of this corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and 7, the Fleshers or Butchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited in the year 1518 from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1534. The several incorporations hold their meetings in the Trades' Hall, in Union street, at the south-east corner of Union bridge, a building of rather florid architecture, erected in 1846-7, from designs by the late Mr. John Smith, architect. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon and box-master, who are chosen annually, a convener, master of hospital, and convener court governing the joint affairs of the seven corporations. The Rev. Dr. William Guild, one of the town's ministers, and afterwards Principal of King's College, founded in 1632 a Trades' Hospital for the benefit of indigent brethren, assigning to the incorporation for that purpose the monastry and other property that formally belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity. The Advocates' Hall is in Broad street, in proximity to and connected with the Court House Buildings. The Society of Advocates (as the local legal practitioners are called) was elected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799 and in 1862. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786; it contains about five thousand volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 150. Among several clubs formed in this city, the "Royal Northern Club" and the "New Club" are the principal. The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in April, 1884, and as a result thereof a reading room was opened to the public in the autumn of 1885, well provided with newspapers, magazines of all kinds, and a selection of books of reference. This department of the library is now located in a hall hired for the purpose at 38 Market street, and is daily resorted to by about 1,500 persons. A lending library was opened to the public in March, 1886, in the hall formerly known as the Mechanics' Hall, Market street. During the year and a half ending 30th September, 1887, there were 346,431 issues of books to the public. The stock of the lending library amounts to about 19,000 volumes of all kinds of literature, and there is in addition the nucleus of a reference library. A Museum and Art Gallery, raised by public subscription, was a few years ago erected in Schoolhill, on the grounds in front of Robert Gordon's College. It is a handsome building, of the Italian Renaissance order, and being largely constructed of light-red and dark-brown granite, presents a novel and striking appearance. It was designed by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects; as was also an adjoining and symmetrical building, intended for an Art School, erected at a cost of £5,000, by Councillor John Gray, and gifted by him to the town. Both buildings are united by a noble archway. A nucleus for the Art Gallery has been formed by the bequest of a magnificent collection by the late Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Kepplestone. The various institutions of a charitable, social, educational and humane character, are numerous and well supported. A list of them will be found under the head "Public Buildings, &c." Two daily morning newspapers, two daily evening, two weekly, two weekly satirical papers, and a bi-weekly advertiser are issued from the Aberdeen press—their titles and other particulars are given in their place. The first almanac ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1623, by Edward Raban, the year after setting up the first printing press in the North. It was entitled "A New Prognostication for the Year of our Lord God, 1623, being the third after Leape Year, serving most fitlie for the Kingdom of Scotland, and all the partes of North Britain, &c." The almanac seems for a long time to have been looked upon as a property of the Aberdeen printers, for a successor of Raban's, named John Forbes, issued one entitled "A New Prognosticator calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a plack, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were suppressed by the Court of Session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacs.

Prominent among the ecclesiastical edifices of the city are the East and West churches. These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, which consisted of nave and aisles, transept and chancel, and was built progressively probably between the 11th and 13th centuries. The present West church occupies the site of the old nave, and was erected in 1755, from a design by the celebrated architect Gibbs, who was a native of Aberdeen. It is in the Roman style, with nave and side aisles, divided by massive square piers and semi-circular arches, and has a finely proportioned interior. It contains sittings for about 1,450. There are several monuments in it worthy of attention, particularly one in marble to the memory of the late Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunottar, which is a splendid specimen of the skill of the sculptor Bacon. The large west window has been fitted in with stained glass. The old East church, which it was deemed necessary to take down in 1835, was built in 1447, partly on the site of the chancel, and formed the choir of the church. The east end was semi-octagonal, and under it was St. Mary's chapel, which still remains. The present East church was erected in 1836, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, in the decorated Gothic style, of finely dressed granite. The old transept, known as Drum's and Collison's aisles, was at the same time opened up southwards, and formed a vestibule for the East and West churches. Over the transept at its intersection with the churches there was a short tower, with a wooden steeple, which on the 9th October, 1874, was destroyed by fire, along with the interior of the East church and Drum's and Collison's aisles. The East church has since been restored, and contains sittings for about 1,350 people. A handsome new tower with spire of granite has also been erected, from a design by Mr. W. Smith, architect, Aberdeen; the spire rises to the height of about 195 feet from the ground. The old Norman arches and piers under the tower were taken down and rebuilt in their original form with the old stones. St. Clement's, or Footdee, church, has a tower forty-five feet high, with a clock presented by the magistrates. Greyfriars, or College church, which stands on the east of Broad street, near Marischal College, is said to have been erected by Bishop Dunbar, for the Grey Friars, about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and is now the only church in the town where the Roman Catholic worship was performed previous to the Reformation. The South church is situated in Belmont street, and is calculated to accommodate 1,450 persons. It is in the Gothic style, and is distinguished by a handsome square tower, which forms a striking object in the approach from the south. The North church, in King street, is an edifice in the Grecian style, executed in finely dressed granite, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, and contains sittings for about 1,450. Old Machar church, at the north extremity of Old Aberdeen, in the parish of Old Machar, consists of the nave of a cathedral founded by Bishop Alexander Kyninmunde II., about the middle of the fourteenth century. The ceiling is of the finest oak, of curious workmanship, and may vie with anything of the kind in Scotland. It consists of three compartments of square panels, joining at the opposite angular points. On these panels are painted the arms and titles of the princes, nobles, and prelates who contributed towards the expenses of the building. Along the top of the walls on the south side are inscribed the names of the successive sovereigns from Malcolm II. to Queen Mary. On the north side are the names of the several bishops, from Nectanus to William Gordon, the last Roman Catholic prelate. All these inscriptions, as well as those on the roof, are painted in the old black Saxon character. Several of the windows have, of late years, been filled in with stained glass; conspicuous amongst these is an "Artists' Window," to the memory of Jameson, Dyce, and Phillip, all Aberdonians. St. Paul's chapel was erected for the accommodation of such Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scotch bishops. It contained sittings for 1,000 persons, but has been superseded by a very handsome new church. The other English Episcopalian chapel is St. James's, a small but striking building in red Corrennie granite, at the corner of Union street and Holburn street. St. Andrew's, or Scotch Episcopalian chapel, is a neat edifice built in 1818. It occupies a site on the east side of King street; the gable or end fronts the street, presenting a centre and a side aisle, the corners of which are ornamented with lofty octagonal turrets, those on each side of the entrance being upwards of eighty feet in height. The turrets are finished with panelling and richly crocketed pinnacles. The entrance gate is embellished with clustered columns and crocketed mouldings, and the windows are finished with tracery in a corresponding style. The interior presents a simple style of Gothic architecture, corresponding with the front entrance. At the west end is a large and fine-toned organ, underneath which is a handsome statue of the late Bishop Skinner, by Flaxman. The building has been enlarged and much improved of late years, a chancel having been added, from a design by the late Mr. G. E. Street, R.A. In 1885 an elegant reredos was placed in the church, to the memory of the late Bishop Suther, for many years its incumbent. St. John's chapel, in St. Mary's place, for Scotch Episcopalians, with a small spire on the north end, will contain about 500 persons; the interior has undergone much alteration and repair. Another Scotch Episcopalian chapel is St. Mary's, Carden place, the most Anglican and Ritualistic of all in design and construction. The Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Mary's of the Assumption, in the early pointed Gothic style, in Huntly street, was consecrated on the 16th of March, 1859. Longitudinally the church is almost east and west, with a nave, north and south aisles, north and south porches, tower and spire, the latter reaching to a height of 200 feet, in which there is a peal of nine bells, the largest weighing 30 cwt. The sanctuary, situated at the east end, forms a continuation of the nave. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar, which is raised seven steps, are two side altars under arched recesses, formed in the east end of the aisles. Internally the dimensions of the church are one hundred and fifty feet in length, sixty-nine feet wide, and sixty-nine feet high from the floor to the apex of the roof, and it will comfortably seat 1,500 persons. The whole of the windows, excepting the large west one, are filled with fine painted glass by Wailes, of Newcastle. The principal entrance is from Huntly street, and above this entrance is the large west window, which is thirty feet high by fifteen feet in width, with tracery and sculptured figures in the centre. On the north side is the priests' house, and on the south a convent, the schools running backwards from the convent along the wall of the south aisle—all having access by a doorway to the church—the whole of which (the arcade excepted), is built of Aberdeen granite. The cost of erection was about £20,000, and the bells, £1,300 in addition; the architect was Mr. Alexander Ellis. There is in connection with the church a very handsome schoolhouse, in Constitution street, erected in 1882, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, in which are educated Catholic children belonging to the congregation. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations, for the names and situations of which we must refer our readers to a list given at a subsequent page, where will be found also the names of the officiating ministers.

The two colleges, which were united by Act of Parliament in 1860, and now form the University of Aberdeen, are very ancient seminaries of learning King's College in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College in Broad street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494, by William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen, under the authority of a Bull of Pope Alexander VI. The original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the College. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college. The building forms a quadrangular court, and has been almost totally reconstructed of late years, spacious class rooms being erected, along with a large library, in which is a very valuable collection of books. The old chapel, however, is retained, and possesses an antique screen of woodwork; the tomb of Bishop Elphinstone is in the middle of the entrance passage. Beautiful stained glass windows have been inserted in memory of Principal Campbell, Professor Macpherson, and Professor Mearns; the large west window was filled with a rich design in stained glass some years ago, the expense being borne by Mr. John Webster, late M.P. for the city. On the south-east corner is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses and covered with a flat roof, having on the top a parapet, over which springs from each of its corners a slip of stonework highly ornamented; these slips meet at the top and form four open arches, in imitation of an imperial crown. On the top of this is a stone lantern, surmounted with another imperial crown of stonework, with a globe and cross. The tower formerly contained a peal of thirteen bells. The Senatus room is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphinstone, Dunbar, &c. The erection of the original buildings commenced about the year 1500. Marischal College was founded and endowed by George Keith, Earl Marischal of Scotland, in 1593, by a charter ratified by Act of Parliament. The college buildings stand on the site of a Franciscan convent, and were rebuilt in 1836-41, at a cost of £21,240. Of this sum Government granted £15,000, and the balance was raised by public subscription. The new college is a spacious, elegant and convenient building, in the Gothic style, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. It forms three sides of a square of one hundred feet, and the accommodation consists of twenty-five large class rooms and laboratories, a hall, a museum, &c. A scheme has been spoken of to complete the square and otherwise add to the buildings, at a total estimated cost of £100,000.

The Grammar School is a new and handsome building at the west end of the town. It in the old Scotch baronial style, and was built in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, from plans drawn by Mr. James Matthews, of Aberdeen. It contains a large public school, 80 feet by 40 feet, lofty, airy and well lighted; five class rooms on the ground floor for the classical department, and four class rooms for arithmetic, writing and modern languages; the library and reading room are in the upper story. The school is of very ancient origin, the first recorded date being as far back as 1262. There are nearly thirty bursaries in connection with the school, for the education of poor scholars, and in 1634 Dr. Patrick Dunn left a bequest for the better payment of the masters. Many eminent men have received their education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byron, 1797; Sir James M'Gregor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602 Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI.; Dr. James Dunn, Dr. James Melvin, &c.

The Free Church Divinity Hall, at the top of Union street, is a beautiful building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000. In this hall the Aberdeen Synod of the Free Church hold their stated meetings. There are now a good library and fair museum attached, both owing much to the liberality of the late Mr. Thomson, of Banchory, near Aberdeen. Latterly, the library has been placed in a separate building specially designed for the purpose.

Robert Gordon's College, Schoolhill, is a spacious building, standing on the ground anciently possessed by the Dominican Friars, and having an extensive piece of ground in front. It consists of a centre or main building and two wings. The original structure occupies the greater part of the centre, and is three storeys in height, having a small neat spire rising from it. The hall on the second floor is 80 feet by 20 feet wide and 12 feet high. This building was erected in 1739 after a design by Gibbs, and at an expense of £3,300. The remaining part of the centre and the wings was completed in 1882 from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, at a cost of about £18,000. The latter erection is in the Grecian style of architecture, presenting a chaste and elegent appearance. The more ancient part has been altered to correspond, and a colonnade now traverses the building from the old house to the projecting fronts at the ends of the wings. The ground in front, which is tastefully laid out, much improves the appearance of the edifice. The sum originally bequeathed was £10,000; this was invested in land, and at the present time the annual revenue is about £4,000. The object of the charity was to maintain and educate the sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses, but by a Provisional Order, obtained in 1881, the original bequest of the founder, Robert Gordon, was set aside, the "Hospital" system abandoned, and the institution converted into day and evening schools, the application of its benefits being also widely extended, the restriction to sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses being abolished.

The Royal Infirmary, situated on Woolmanhill, is a modern erection, and consists of a central compartment and projecting wings, the length in front being about one hundred and fifty feet, and the breadth one hundred and twelve. The building rises to the height of three lofty storeys, the lowest containing the requisite offices for the establishment, and the other floors wards and private apartments. There is accomodation for 300 patients. One of the wings is so contrived that it may be used as a separate fever hospital. In the centre of the upper part of the front is a spacious operation room, lighted from above through a dome thirty feet in diameter. The whole is designed in a simple style of Grecian architecture, and executed in dressed granite. From the elegance of the design and the beauty of the materials, as well as the situation of the building, it forms an ornamental feature of the city from various points of view, and is allowed to be a highly creditable proof of the skill of the architect, the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, to whose talents the city is indebted for some of its most tasteful public buildings and private mansions. It has been found, however, not to be in accordance with modern hygienic ideas; and in 1887 Lord Provost Henderson was successful in raising an Extension Fund of about £30,000, as a memorial of the Queen's Jubilee, to be devoted to the erection of new wards behind the present building, the latter to be used solely for administrative purposes. The Lunatic Asylum consists of two buildings, one of which was raised in 1800, the other in 1819. The insufficiency of the old building for the purposes of the institution rendering the erection of a more spacious and commodious one necessary, an adjoining field of three acres was purchased, and an elegant edifice erected according to a plan by the architect of the Infirmary, Mr. Archibald Simpson. Since that period it has received additions, under the superintendence of Mr. William Ramage, architect. Elmhill House is an establishment of a superior description, in connection with and under the same management as the Royal Asylum, and designed for the accommodation of the wealthier class of patients. A succursal asylum is about to be established at Glack, some twenty miles north of Aberdeen. The Asylum for the Blind, situated in Huntly street, was opened in 1843. It is supported partly by revenue from endowments and partly by legacies and public subscriptions. Work is provided for blind persons of both sexes belonging to the city of Aberdeen and the three counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine. The chief industries carried on are twine spinning and basket and mattress making. From fifty to sixty blind persons are thus employed. In addition, blind children and young persons are kept in the institution, and receive education in ordinary subjects and in industrial training. The Board of Management, as re-constituted under the authority of the Endowment Commission, consists of persons elected by the subscribers, or nominated either by benefactors to the institution, or by certain public bodies in Aberdeen or the above mentioned counties. The Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb is in Belmont street, and is principally supported by voluntary contributions. The average number of pupils of both sexes is thirty. The Boys' and Girls' Hospital in King Street road was instituted in 1852. Its objects are the maintenance and education of poor children of the parish of St. Nicholas. The Medical Society's Hall, King street, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns. It contains a library and museum, a large room for the meetings of the society, committee rooms, &c. It was built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, from the plan of the architect of the Infirmary. In the hall are some portraits, among the rest an original painting of Harvey by Vandyke. There are also two by James Giles, R.A., which are both favourable specimens of the skill of this distinguished native artist.

The weekly markets are held on Wednesday and Friday, and the feeing markets Friday before and after the 26th of May, Friday before and after 22nd November; wool markets, Thursday and Friday of first and second week in July; timber, the last Wednesday in August. The population of Aberdeen, according to the returns of 1871, amounted to 88,189—39,792 males and 48,397 females. The inhabited houses at the same date was 6,716. In 1881 the population numbered 105,054—48,169 males and 56,885 females. The number of inhabited houses had increased in 1881 to 20,341. The valuation of the city for 1887-8 amounted to £506,357.

Old Aberdeen stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, in the parish of Old Machar, of which it is the capital. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishop of Aberdeen, but it now derives its original importance from King's College (amalgamated with the University of Aberdeen) and the Cathedral. The charter was renewed by George I. when the power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, which are now a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and council, with the deacons of six incorporated trades. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the old bridge, which crosses the river Don by one Gothic pointed arch. Mr. Kennedy, in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected in the time of Robert Bruce, by Bishop Cheyne. Woodside is a police burgh in this parish, with a population of 5,223, distant from Aberdeen 2 miles, and a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish of Old Machar lies in the peninsula between the Dee and the Don, where they join the ocean. Its length is about seven or eight miles, and its greatest breadth four. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Dee and Don—the manufactories and the woods on the banks of the latter, interspersed with many gentlemen's seats and villas, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means of materially enhancing the value of the land, and beautifying the neighbourhood of Aberdeen. The parish of Old Machar possesses an acreage of 12,148; in 1871 its population was 42,477, and in 1881 it had increased to 56,002.

Nigg is a parish in Kincardineshire, situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains. It is bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Devenick. It extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The parish church is distant 2 miles s. from Aberdeen. The coast is bold and rocky. The north-east point, called Girdleness, is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the Bay of Nigg, close beside which are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fiacre. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and pier, and contains extensive brick and tile works; also a preserved provision manufactory. The Victoria Bridge, a handsome granite structure, now spans the Dee, and connects Torry with Aberdeen. Cove is also a small fishing village in the parish, situated 4 miles s. from Aberdeen, and is a station on the Caledonian Railway. The parish has an acreage of 4,432. The population in 1871 was 2,348, and in 1881, 2,935.

Cults is a pleasant suburb of Aberdeen in the parish of Banchory-Devenick, situated on the north bank of the Dee, on the road to Ballater, distant from Aberdeen 4 miles s.w. and is a station on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland Railway. In the vicinity are many handsome villas and cottages, chiefly the residences of those engaged in business in Aberdeen. Population returned with the parish.

ABOYNE,

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, GLENTANA, BIRSE AND LUMPHANAN.

ABOYNE, or CHARLESTOWN OF ABOYNE, is a small village in the parish of Aboyne, district of Mar, 30 miles from Aberdeen, 4 from Kincardine, 4 from Glentana, and 11 from Ballater, situated on the north bank of the Dee, and in the County Court District of Aberdeen. There is a station here on the Dee Side Railway. The parish is united to that of Glentana, and is watered by the river just named and likewise by the Tana and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The forest of Glentana is extensive, and contains some large timber. Woodend, the seat of Sir William Cunliffe Brooks, Bart., M.P., is pleasantly situated in the district of Glentana. The Dee here is crossed by a very handsome suspension bridge, built at the sole expense of the Marquis of Huntly in 1830 (re-erected by the County Road Trustees in 1871), whose seat, Aboyne Castle, ornaments this locality. In the grounds of the castle is a remarkable stone, shaped like a coffin, with a cross cut upon it. Loch Cannor is situated about 4 miles from Aboyne. It contains some small islands, on one of which there is said to have been a castle built by Malcolm Canmore. In the loch have been found articles of antiquity, among them an old axe, several canoes of oak, cut out of the solid tree, and a bronze pot. There is a good library and reading room in the village. In the parish there is an Established church, besides a Free church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and two schools. Fairs are held at Aboyne on the third Thursday in January, March, May, August, September and December, second Wednesday in April, last Wednesday in June, the Friday after Aiky fair in July, first Tuesday and Wednesday in October (old style), and second Wednesday in November. The parish, which has an area of 25,265 acres, in 1881, contained a population of 1,427.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, a parish and village, the latter the seat of a presbytery, is situated on the public road and the banks of the Dee, between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles from the former, 16 from the latter, and 24 from Stonehaven. St. Erchan's well, whose waters are said to be of a medicinal character, is situated near this village. At TORPHINS, in this parish, are public schools, a Free church, an Established church, and a station on the Dee Side railway, about three miles from Kincardine-O'Niel. Dess station is about two miles from Kincardine, and in the neighbouring parish of Aboyne. The buildings, which principally surround the church, command an extensive prospect up the river, towards the Grampian mountains, and the place is much resorted to for the summer retirement of invalids, being much protected from the north and east winds. In early days, Kincardine was of some note, for it is upon record that a wooden bridge was built across the Dee 600 years ago, the expense of which was defrayed by a knight called Allan Durward. The parish, which is about nine miles in length by six in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral and partly arable, while in some places are thriving plantations. The greater portion of the inhabitants are occupied in agriculture, and others are employed by the manufacturers of Aberdeen in knitting worsted stockings. The village contains Established, Free, and Episcopalian churches, a public school, and a hall, which was erected in 1885 by public subscription. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (o.s.) Markets are held at TORPHINS in January, May, November and December. The acreage of the parish is 18,132, and the population in 1881 was 1,931.

BIRSE, the most southern parish of Aberdeenshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, enclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges run two streams of water—the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable, but the old system of agriculture is giving way to modern improvements. The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish. Large upright stones, cairns, and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. The parish church is distant about 28 miles from Aberdeen. The manse of the Free church was erected in 1844, the church itself being built in 1843. In the parish of Birse, in which there are one proprietary and three public schools, are the remains of two ancient encampments. Acreage of the parish, 31,218. Population in 1881, 1,091.

LUMPHANAN parish, which lies to the north-west of the village of Kincardine-O'Niel, is about six miles in length and four in breadth, and is nearly surrounded by hills. The name signifies "the bare little valley," but this designation is not in the present day applicable to the lowlands, which are now well-cultivated and fruitful. This is the district in which the usurper Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff, in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones (in the midst of which a stone coffin was found some time ago) has been raised commemorative of the event, and corroborative of the finale of Shakspere's drama. The parish, which contains a public school, and an Established and a Free church, consists of 8,754 acres, with a population in 1881 of 1,130.

ALFORD,

GLENBUCKET, KEIG, KILDRUMMY, STRATHDOWN, TOUGH, TOWIE, TULLYNESSLE WITH FORBES, AND LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE.

ALFORD is a village and parish—the former, the seat of a presbytery, is 27 miles W.N.W. from Aberdeen, and 18 S.S.E. from Huntly, and is the terminus of the Alford Valley line, a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is seven miles in length, and about three in breadth, and covers an area of 9,102 acres. In the village are branches respectively of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited. The places of worship are Established, Free, and Episcopalian churches. Markets are held on the 14th November and every third Tuesday; the half-yearly feeing markets being held on the Mondays before the 26th May and the 22nd November. Population in 1881, 1,472.

KEIG, a small parish intersected by the Don, is nearly of circular form, and between three and four miles in diameter. Castle Forbes, the seat of Lord Forbes, is in this parish, surrounded by thriving plantations, besides a natural wood of considerable extent. The seat commands a fine view of the windings of the river Don for many miles. Two druidical circles are in this parish, also a barmekin or old celtic fort. The parish is about four miles N.E. from Alford, and 25 N.W. from Aberdeen; and it has an area of 8,059 acres. Population in 1881, 776.

GLENBUCKET is a parish of 11,084 acres, in the district of Mar, 12 miles N. from Alford, and 29 S.S.W. from Huntly, situated on both sides of the Bucket, a tributary stream to the Don, and extending about four miles in length, by about one in breadth. The ruins of Badenyon House, alluded to in the popular Scotch song of "John of Badenyon," are in this parish. Population in 1881, 506.

STRATHDON parish lies between those of Glenbucket and Kildrummy. The land in this district is for the most part fertile and tolerably well cultivated. Acreage, 47,728. Population in 1881, 1,316.

KILDRUMMY parish lies in a valley, distant 6 miles W. from Alford, 35 W. from Aberdeen, and 16 S. from Huntly. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntington and Garioch was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat to his queen in the winter of 1306. It is a ruin of great antiquity, and appears to have been strongly fortified, having subterraneous passages and concealments. It was distinguished by its seven towers, one of which, from the whiteness of its stone, was called the Snow Tower; these ruins cover an acre of ground. The parish has an area of 10,352 acres, and its population in 1881 was 656.

LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE is a joint parish situated three miles S. from Alford. The ruins of the ancient castles of Linturk and Corse are within the parish. In the latter were born several of the Forbes, one of whom (Patrick Forbes of Corse) wrote a Commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar Castle, the elegant seat of Sir William Forbes, Bart., is also in this parish, and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country. Acreage 12,856. Population in 1881, 1,217.

TOUGH parish is two miles S.E. from Alford, 23 S.S.E. from Huntly, and 22 N.W. from Aberdeen. Several druidical temples may be seen in this district, one of which, on the hill, about two miles from the church, still retains the name of the Old Kirk of Tough. Area, 7,108 acres. Population in 1881, 681.

The parish of TOWIE is eight miles W.S.W. from Alford, and 23 S. from Huntly, and is watered by the Don, which flows through it from east to west. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and the eminences are mostly covered with heath. Acreage 12,150. Population in 1881, 759.

TULLYNESSLE and FORBES, parishes united, lie 27 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 18 S.S.E. from Huntly, on the north bank of the Don. The appearance of the country is hilly, or rather mountainous. Some of the hills are of considerable altitude, and game is abundant. Acreage 11,279. Population in 1881, 981.

AUCHTERLESS,

MONTQUHITTER, CUMINESTOWN, GARMOND, INVERKEITHNY, YTHAN WELLS, BADENSCOTH, AND GORDONSTOWN.

AUCHTERLESS, a parish situate about midway between Aberdeen and Banff, is about 7 miles long and 3 broad; the soil is generally productive, and is watered by the river Ythan. The vestiges of an extensive fortified camp, the enclosed area of which is computed at 120 acres are well worthy the attention of the antiquary. BADENSCOTH and GORDONSTOWN are places in this parish. Acreage, 16,826. Population in 1881, 2,144.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, lies on the right or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about 6 miles, and measures from one to four miles in breath. Marnock bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south, and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly. Acreage, 7,641. Population in 1881, 909.

MONTQUHITTER is a parish extending about 9 miles from north to south, and 6 from east to west, bounded by Turriff on the west, King Edward on the north, New Deer on the east, and Fyvie on the south. The surface is uneven and arable in the lower parts. The district was once very mossy and moorish, but has been considerably improved. The parish is watered by two small rivers; one of these discharges itself into the Ythan, and other into the Deveron; both abound with trout. CUMINESTOWN and GARMOND are two villages in this parish. Acreage, 17,493. Population in 1881, 2,794.

POST OFFICE, AUCHTERLESS, John Cheyne, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (via Turriff) at 12 15 and 8 15 p.m., and are despatched thereto at 5 50 a.m. and 12 20 p.m.——The nearest Money Order Office is at TURRIFF, six miles distant.

BALLATER,

WITH THE PARISH OF GLENMUICK, AND THE VILLAGES OF GLENGAIRN, TULLICH, PANNANICH WELLS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BALLATER is an agreeable and quiet village, in the parish of Glenmuick, pleasantly situated upon the River Dee, 42 miles from Aberdeen, 11 from Aboyne, and 18 from Braemar. It is much resorted to in the summer by tourists, on account of the scenery around, which combines both the picturesque and the grand. The neighbourhood is also occasionally honoured by the presence of royalty—Balmoral Castle being 9 miles distant, and Abergeldie Castle, a seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, 7 miles distant. The ruins of Knock Castle are ornamental to the scenery at one point, and the country is studded with many seats of the gentry. Loch Cannor is in this neighbourhood; on a small island within it are the ruins of a castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore. The lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel and other woods. Speaking of this district, indeed, it may be pronounced one of the most interesting in Aberdeenshire. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the Established church standing near to its centre, and the Free church upon the outskirts. Several houses have been erected expressly for the reception of visitors, and additional accommodation is found in a very superior hotel—the Ivercauld Arms—containing every convenience that may be desired either by families or commercial gentlemen. The Great North of Scotland railway line from Aboyne terminates here. A military barracks, to accommodate about 70 men, was erected here in 1870. Fairs are held at Ballater on the second Tuesday in May, and the second Monday and Tuesday in September (O.S.), and on the Saturday previous to the 22nd November (N.S.) Population in 1881, 759.

GLENMUICK is a large parish in the district of Mar, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuick, Tullich, and Glengairn. It lies about 40 miles W. of Aberdeen, is about 18 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, intersected by the Dee, and several of its tributary streams. The soil is shallow and early, producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation, and many of them covered with wood to the very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant. Acreage, 87,341. Population of the whole parish in 1881, 2,109.

In the village of TULLICH are seen the remains of an old kirk, the walls of which enclose the burial place of the Farquharsons, of Whitehouse. The view from this spot looking towards the west is much admired, and presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all.

The mineral wells and baths at PANNANICH are within about two miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dee. The waters are highly serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity or vitiated in quality; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. The increasing demand for accommodation evinces that the wells are justly rising in public estimation. There is a good hotel adjacent to the wells.

POST OFFICE, BALLATER, Elizabeth Farquharson, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts at 9 40 and 11 55 a.m. and 7 15 p.m., and are despatched at 7 and 10 15 a.m. and 2 30 and 7 p.m.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

POST OFFICE, DINNET, Alexander Fraser, Post Master.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at 9 15 a.m. and 6 45 p.m., and are despatched thereto at 10 30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

CRATHIE,

BRAEMAR, BALMORAL, AND CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE, or Crathy, is an extensive mountainous parish, in the heart of Mar, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating the suppressed parish of BRAEMAR; jointly they comprise a territory 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round; Ben-Macdhui, 4,300 feet in height, and Lochnagar, 3,800 feet in height, are among the stupendous eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of this district was once covered with wood, and was called the Forest of Mar, which, with those of the Duke of Athol, in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon, in Badenoch and Glenaven, constituted the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Braemar, a considerable portion of the wood still remains, which is well stocked with deer.

BALMORAL CASTLE, the highland residence of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Abergeldie Castle, belonging to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this parish, as is also Lochmuich, one of the shooting boxes of His Royal Highness. Many seats of the nobility and gentry embellish this interesting locality. Population in 1881, 1,566.

LOCHNAGAR, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callater, and Loch Brotachan, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes the whole extent. On this line is the village of BRAEMAR, or CASTLETOWN, near which are the ruins of an ancient castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluny—the one side of the water, called AUCHINDRYNE, belonging to the Earl of Fife, the other to Alexander Haldane Farquharson, Esq., of Invercauld. At a short distance from Braemar, is the castle of Breamar, once garrisoned by King William, and burnt in the contest which took place between the Royal forces and the Earl of Mar; it was rebuilt in 1749, and till within the last few years, was occupied by Government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible qaurries of limestone and fine slate. Braemar, with a population of about 350 persons, possesses two first-class hotels, and is much resorted to in summer by tourists.

CRIMOND, LONMAY, RATHEN, AND ST. FERGUS.

CRIMOND is a parish lying an equal distance from the towns of Fraserburgh and Peterhead, upon the coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean of about three miles in breadth, which declines to a point, inland, at the distance of rather more than five miles. Rattray Head, on the coast, is a very dangerous promontory. Near the east end of the lake Strathbeg is a small hill, called the Castle Hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. About a hundred years ago, there was communication between the loch of Strathbeg and the sea, and a harbour at the east end, close to the castle, for small craft; in one night the mouth of the harbour was filled up by the drifting of sand, and the communication has been interrupted ever since. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray. There is a ruin of a small chapel near the site of the old burgh of Rattray, said to have been erected by the Earl of Buchan, about the year 1200. The only place of worship is a church under the Establishment, and there is also a public school in the village. The area of the parish is 5,891 acres, and its population was in 1881, 882.

The parish of LONMAY has about four miles of sea coast, is ten miles long, and varies in breadth from half a mile to four miles. The soil is various, but generally fertile. In this parish, about four miles N.E., is the fishing village of ST. COMBS. There are two Established and one Episcopalian churches in the parish, also several public schools. A considerable branch of the river Ugie passes through the southern boundary of the parish for half a mile.

RATHEN parish is about three miles distant from Fraserburgh, and is about eight miles long, with a medium of two in breadth, covering an area of 9,587 acres. It possesses two creeks, on which are built the fishing villages of CAIRNBULG and INVERALLOCHY. The places of worship are the parish church, a neat modern edifice, and a Free church, also a church of the Establishment at Inverallochy, and public schools at Rathen and Inverallochy. There are two old castles in ruins in the parish, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. This parish is destitute of growing timber, though large masses of oak are occasionally dug up from morasses. Population in 1881, 2,825.

ST. FERGUS, a village and parish, though locally situate on the coast of Aberdeenshire, is in that part of the district of Buchan which belongs to the county of Banff. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead. The village is five miles distant from that town, and thirteen from Fraserburgh. Here are Established and Free churches, and a Baptist chapel, also public and endowed schools. The great Field Marshal Keith, of whom a statue in bronze was presented to the town of Peterhead by King William I. of Prussia, was born in 1696, at Inverugie Castle, the ruins of which, in a bend of the river, still attract the notice of the traveller. Acreage of the parish, 8,856. Population in 1881, 1,527.

POST OFFICE, CRIMOND, Christina Gordon, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from Peterhead at 12 15 p.m. and from Lonmay at 1 20 p.m., and are depatched to Lonmay at 1 20 p.m., and to Peterhead at 2 35 p.m.——The nearest Money Order and Telegrayh Office is at LONMAY.

POST OFFICE, LONMAY, James Forrest, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Fraserburgh at 7 30 a.m. and 7 20 p.m.; from Aberdeen and the South at 9 a.m., 12 noon, and 6 15 p.m.; and are despatched to Fraserburgh at 8 40 a.m., and to Peterhead, Maud, Mintlaw, and Aberdeen at 7 a.m., and to Aberdeen and the South at 2 30 and 7 p.m.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

POST OFFICE, ST. FERGUS, Alexander Walker, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Peterhead at 11 15 a.m. and from Lonmay at 3 45 p.m.; and are despatched to Lonmay (for the South) at 11 20 a.m., and to Peterhead at 3 50 p.m.— The nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office is at PETERHEAD.

Letters for Memsie should be addressed "via FRASERBURGH;" for Rathen, Cairnbulg and Inverallochy "via LONMAY;" and for Kininmonth, "via MINTLAW."

ECHT,

DRUMOAK, PETERCULTER, MIDMAR, AND SKENE.

ECHT, a parish 12 miles w. of Aberdeen, is about 5 miles in length and the same in breadth. It is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. In this parish is Dunecht House, the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, whose observatory here, founded in 1872, is one of the best equipped in the kingdom. It is fitted with a 15 inch equational refractor, by Grubb, besides several others of smaller dimensions. There is also a library of about 15,000 titles, and a large collection of physical instruments. The remains of a Pictish camp, much prized by antiquarians, are upon the summit of a hill adjacent to Dunecht. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michaelmas fair, in October, and the second Tuesday in November. The parish has an area of 11,948 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,297 persons.

DRUMOAK parish 10 miles from Aberdeen, is chiefly in Aberdeenshire, having a small portion in Kincardineshire. It is about four miles long, and about the same in breadth, and embraces an area of 7,228 acres. The surface is hilly, a great part being fit only for sheep pasture, while the arable land is shallow and produces but moderate crops. There are two stations here on the Dee Side line. The tower of Drum is a very ancient edifice. Population in 1881, 930.

PETERCULTER parish is about 8 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is situated 7¼ miles from Aberdeen. The surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats interspersed. On the banks of the Dee and its tributary streams however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown are the remains of a rectangular encampment. The Dee Side Railway Company have three stations in the parish. In this parish are paper mills belonging to the Culter Mills Paper Co. Limited. Acreage, 10,547. Population in 1881, 1,908.

SKENE parish is about 8 miles from Aberdeen, the same number of miles in length, and 4 at its extreme breadth. On the south is the Luchar burn, a tributary stream of the Dee, issuing from Loch Skene, a small lake; and in the north-west direction thence is Skene House, the residence of Mr. George Hamilton, an elegant country mansion, surrounded by some thriving plantations. In this parish is an extensive spinning and carding mill, worked by Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons. A list of the churches of these several parishes, with their ministers, is given under the head Places of Worship. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Easter. Acreage, 10,246. Population in 1881, 1,787.

MIDMAR parish, 15 miles from Aberdeen, is about 5½ miles in length, and 4 in breadth. The vale of Corrichie, near the southern boundary, is well known as the scene of a battle fought during the reign of Queen Mary, when the contending parties were headed by the Marquis of Huntly and the Earl of Murray. The principal eminence in this part is the hill of Fare, which rises nearly 1,800 feet above the level of the sea. Acreage, 10,866. Population in 1881, 1,041.

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ELLON parish extends about nine miles in length from north to south, and five in breadth, and comprehends an area of 22,259 acres. The surface is uneven and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. The village of Ellon is about 16 miles N.E. from Aberdeen, pleasantly situated on the Ythan, which is here crossed by a bridge. Upon the river, which is navigable for large boats, within half a mile of the village, a trade in coal and corn is carried on of some importance; and the monetary affairs of the district are facilitated by three banking establishments; they are branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Town and County Bank, Limited, and the North of Scotland Bank, Limited. Ellon was not at one time an insignificant village, but the assize town of a populous district—the scene of penal trial, the doomsman's place of execution, and the scene of mortal combat. Within the last few years several new and handsome buildings have been erected in the village, and the present proprietor (Arthur John Lewis Gordon, Esq. J.P.) gives every encouragement in the way of feus, for which there are several very eligible sites. It has many attractions, and therefore, in the summer season, there are many visitors, who find excellent accommodation at Lamont's Hotel. The trout fishing on the Ythan has long been celebrated, as also the pearls which are found in that river, one of which is the great pearl in the Crown of Scotland.

The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterians and Episcopal congregations. The Established church has recently undergone several improvements, which included the erection of a new organ and the putting in of four additional windows, at a cost of about £500. A fine Episcopal church, called St. Mary's, from designs by the late Mr. G. E. Street, of London, is also in the village. There are several public schools in the parish. The market is held on the first and third Monday in each month, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May, and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November. Population of the entire parish in 1881, 3,698, and of the village, 811.

CRUDEN parish lies on the east of Buchan district, extending from eight to nine miles along the shore, and about seven miles inland, and has an area of 18,236 acres. The soil is various, a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slains Castle, the seat of the Earl of Erroll, a large edifice on a precipice overhanging the sea, and the celebrated "Buller of Buchan," are in this parish. The latter is a large rocky cavern, open to the sky, into which the sea rushes through a natural archway. The rocks are probably one hundred feet in height, both to the interior of "The Pot" and also on their sea front. It is scarcely possible to overstate the impressing magnificence of these granite sea walls. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterians and Episcopalians. There is also a well-conducted school. Population of the parish in 1881, 3,444, and of the village 210.

The parish of FOVERAN extends seven miles in length from east to west, and about two in breadth, and comprises 10,537 acres. It is distant from Aberdeen ten miles, and from Belhelvie two, and its general appearance is level, but the ground rises by a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. The Ythan, navigable for about three miles, forms the boundary on the north. The places of worship are the parish church and a Free church. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, in which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, lime, bones and guano. In this parish are to be seen the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,042.

LOGIE BUCHAN parish is over nine miles in length, but does not average one mile in breadth. It is thirteen miles from Aberdeen, the turnpike road crossing the parish between two and three miles from Ellon, and again four miles north of the same place. It is divided into two parts by the river Ythan, to the right of which stands the parish kirk. The surface of the country is tolerably level, and is well cultivated, the soil being in general fertile. The Ythan is navigable with the tide for boats to the extent of four miles up the country, which is of material advantage to the agriculturists, by supplying them with lime, &c. Acreage, 6,603. Population in 1881, 767.

FRASERBURGH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FRASERBURGH is a flourishing seaport town and burgh of barony and regality, in a parish of the same name, 151 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, 42 N. of Aberdeen, 22 E. of Banff (26 by the new road), and 18 N.W. from Peterhead; situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, a bold promontory, surmounted by a lighthouse, which is one of the oldest under the Commissioners of Northern Lights. It is built upon the site of a very ancient castle, which was, about five hundred years ago, occupied by the Saltoun family. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about three miles and a half each way, containing 8,367 acres. At one time the name of the parish was Philorth, and the possessions of Lord Saltoun here retain this appellation. The original name of the burgh was Faithlie, and in 1546 it was declared a free port and burgh of barony by royal charter, in favor of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth. By a precept of sasine granted by King James VI. in 1592, the name was altered to Port de Fraser, and by a crown charter dated April 4th, 1601, the same monarch caused it to be a burgh of regality and the name changed to Fraserburgh, from the name of the proprietor or superior, Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth, to whom and his heirs these charters gave the superiority of the burgh and the right and authority of provost. The town is neatly built, forming a square, is well supplied with water, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre are the Town's House and a Cross—the latter of modern date. A sheriff's small debt court is held monthly in the Dalrymple Hall. The burgh is governed, under Lord Saltoun as superior, by a town council consisting of a bailie holding a commission from his lordship, a dean of guild, and thirteen councillors, of whom one is chosen as treasurer; there is also a procurator fiscal and town clerk. An election takes place annually in November, when the old magistrates and councillors nominate the new for his lordship's approval. The dean of guild has charge of the weights and measures, and the supervision of tenements and prevention of encroachment on the streets and public thoroughfares. The magistrates and council direct the municipal affairs of the burgh, the chief and most important part of which are the administration of the common good. George A. Morris, Esq. is Lord Saltoun's commissioner and factor. In 1872 the burgh adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, and under that Act there are twelve Commissioners, elected by occupiers of £4 rent, three of whom are bailies. The Police Board is quite distinct from the Town Council, and has no control, except for police purposes, over the town's property or its revenue. Under the Police Bill now (1888) before Parliament, it is believed that the Town Council and Police Commissioners will be amalgamated, thus putting an end to the antiquated election of the councillors by the superior.

There is an excellent harbour, which has been much improved during the last dozen years, under a Provisional Order of 1873, and a new harbour act obtained in 1878. The harbour (the annual revenue from which is £8,000 to £10,000) is managed by the superior of the burgh, the acting chief magistrate, the factor for the superior, five persons elected by the feuars, two by the shipowners, two by the police commissioners, three by the harbour ratepayers, and one by the town council. A breakwater (commenced in 1875, and upon which £72,000 has been expended) extending about 860 feet into the bay in a southerly direction, has been completed. Besides affording a berthage to a large number of ships and boats at low water as well as high water, it shelters an area of 12½ acres, where from 500 to 600 fishing boats can be comparatively safe at all states of the tide. A further sum of £70,000 has been expended in deepening the south and the north harbours, widening the piers, and other additions to existing works. The berthage has been greatly enlarged lately, and now extends to about 9,250 feet, where fishing boats can safely lie and discharge fish, and of which 6,425 feet is available for shipping. With these improvements Fraserburgh now possesses one of the finest and most commodious harbours on the east coast of Scotland. During spring tides vessels drawing from 16 to 18 feet enter the harbour, and during neap tides the depth is from 13 to 15 feet. The herring fishery, which has been established here for upwards of half a century, has been so largely developed during the last twelve years that Fraserburgh may now be put down as the foremost station in Scotland. The number of boats engaged in this fishery is about 800, and the annual value of herrings exported reaches from £200,000 to £300,000. Within the last few years the shipping entering the harbour has averaged from forty to fifty-five thousand tons. A pretty large trade is done in timber, imported from Norway and Sweden, the other chief imports being coals, salt, white fish, &c., while the principal exports are herrings, grain, empty barrels, potatoes, &c. Within the burgh has been erected, at a cost of £3,000, a hospital bearing the name of the donor, being called Thomas Walker's Hospital. The site was given by the Right Honourable Lord Saltoun, of Philorth. It is supported partly by an endowment of £1,000, and by assessments on Fraserburgh and the neighbouring parish of Rathen. Dalrymple Hall and Café is also a new erection, having cost in its entirety about £4,500. The origin of this, like the hospital, is indicated by its name, and is due to the credit of the late Captain John Dalrymple, who anxious to do something for the good of his native town, presented to a body of his townsmen the site along with a sum of £1,700, as a nucleus for its erection. The style of architecture is a modification of the Scottish baronial. In addition to the café, dining rooms, &c., it has a news room, library, museum, school of art, recreation room, baths, &c., together with a public hall capable of holding 1,100 people, with necessary ante-rooms.

The places of worship are two churches of the Establishment, a Free church, a Scotch Episcopal church, dedicated to St. Peter, a United Presbyterian church, one for Congregationalists, and chapels each for the Baptists and the Evangelical Union. The Free church, which was erected in 1880, at a cost of £6,500, on the site of the old parish school, near the railway station, was built chiefly by subscription from the congregation. It is of granite, and highly ornamental both in the interior and exterior, and on the whole is one of the most handsome buildings of the kind in the north. The educational requirements of the parish are supplied by several institutions in the town, and of these the most important is the new public schools which were erected at a cost of £7,000, and opened on the 12th September, 1882, by the Right Hon. Lord Saltoun. The building is of large dimensions, and has an imposing appearance. At the north end of the schools a tower, in which are a clock and a bell, rises to a considerable height, adding greatly to the architectural features of the building and the importance of the burgh. The interior is fitted up with all the latest improvements for the comfort of the pupils, including a system of folding doors whereby large rooms are speedily sub-divided into several smaller ones, and complete isolation thereby obtained for each class with their teacher. Fraserburgh Academy, which is also a well appointed building, was built at a cost of £2,500, and endowed by James Park, Esq.; it was opened in 1870. There is also a school belonging to the Episcopalians, and an endowed school, which was instituted in 1863, by Miss Strachan, of Cortes, in memory of her brother, James Strachan, Esq. M.D., Inspector-General of Army Hospitals, Madras; it is managed by a body of trustees composed of the members of the Kirk Session and Lord Saltoun's commissioner. In the fishing village of BROADSEA, which is within the burgh, there is a school of considerable dimensions exclusively for the accommodation of the village children; it is under the management of the Kirk Session. A Fishermen's Hall was also erected in the village, in 1887 by public subscription, and is a neat and commodious building. The district of TECHMUIRY, which though part of Fraserburgh parish, is disjoined therefrom by the parish of Rathen, contains a school under the management of the School Board; it is also used as a preaching station in connection with the Established church. On the 1st May, 1865, the Fraserburgh extension of the Formartine and Buchan railway was opened, and has greatly added to the interests of the town. There are two first-class hotels here — the Saltoun Hotel and the Station Hotel, in either of which will be found every convenience. The market, chiefly for corn and cattle, is held on Tuesday. Population of the burgh in 1871, 4,268, and of the whole parish, 5,301 in 1881, the burgh numbered 6,583, and the parish, 7,596.

FYVIE,

METHLICK, MEIKLEFOLLA, WOODHEAD, MILLBREX AND ROTHIENORMAN.

FYVIE is an inland parish of 29,586 acres, on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, 7 miles N.N.W. from Old Meldrum, and 25 N.N.W. from Aberdeen, lying on both sides of the river Ythan, which, between Fyvie and Methlick, flows through a romantic wooded gorge called the Braes of Gight. Fyvie Castle, the seat of Sir Maurice Duff-Gordon, stands in a delightful situation; it is among the first specimens of Gothic architecture, and has been repaired and greatly improved. The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a beautiful loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, are the ruins of a priory, founded along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Buchan, in 1179, and was given to the abbey of Arbroath. The places of worship in the parish are Established and Free churches—one each, and two Episcopal churches, respectively situated at the villages of WOODHEAD and MEIKLEFOLLA, and one Mission church in connection with the Establishment. At MILLBREX is a chapel of ease under the Establishment. Cattle markets are held at Fyvie station on the third Thursday in every month. ROTHIENORMAN is a place in this parish Population of parish in 1881, 3,313.

METHLICK parish, about 6 miles N.N.W. from Fyvie, and 22 N.N.W. from Aberdeen, is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north, Savoch and Ellon on the east, and Tarves on the south; it extends nine miles in length, by upwards of four in breadth, and covers an area of of 14,842 acres. The district is intersected throughout its extent, from the north-west to the south-east, by the river Ythan, on the banks of which there now appear some thriving and decrative plantations. The village is neat and rural, and close to it the river is crossed by a neat iron bridge. There is a church of the Establishment and also a Free church in the village, the former erected in 1867, by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost of about £5,000. About two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen. Fairs are held in the village on the first Thursday after the 11th of May, and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,162.

HUNTLY,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CAIRNEY, FORGUE, GLASS, DRUMBLADE, GARTLY, YTHAN WELLS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and seat of presbytery, is a pleasing and modern town, the capital of the parish of that name; 123 miles N. of Edinburgh, 66 E. of Inverness, 38 N. of Aberdeen, 21 S.W. of Banff, and 18 S.E. of Fochabers. The parish is about 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dunbenan and Kinnoir. Perhaps there is no part of the county in which agriculture has achieved more success than in this parish. A few years ago the general surface was anything but productive, but, through systematic culture and perseverance, it has been wonderfully enriched, and now, for production and quality, is inferior to none in the North of Scotland. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the eminences are clothed with fine plantations. The district is watered by the Bogie and the Deveron. St. Mungo's hill, in the district of Kinnoir, has the appearance of a volcano, and on the summit there is an opening, which is generally filled with water, though in dry seasons peat is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur; and pieces of lava, it is said, have been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble, and takes a very high polish, is obtained in the parish. The town, which is well lighted with gas by a joint-stock company, is in a dry and salubrious situation, on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a handsome bridge. This place is neatly built, having two principal streets crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square for the market place, the chief ornament in which is the Huntly Brander Public Library, erected in 1885. This fine building is in the perpendicular Gothic style of architecture of the sixteenth century, and was presented to the town by William Brander, Esq., of London, as part of a gift of £6,500 for educational purposes to his native town. The library consists of about 5,500 volumes of useful literature. A weekly newspaper, the Huntly Express, is published in the town on Saturday. Stewart's Hall, in Gordon street, burnt down in 1886, and rebuilt in 1887, is an imposing structure, surmounted with a tower containing a clock; the large hall, used for public meetings, &c., has sitting accommodation for 650 people. A cottage hospital is in course of erection as a jubilee memorial. The Duke of Richmond, who is superior, appoints a baron bailie. Justice courts are held as occasions require, in the above mentioned hall, and a sheriff's small debt court quarterly, the jurisdiction of the latter extending over twelve parishes. The principal hotel here is the Gordon Arms, where tourists and visitors will find every accommodation. Huntly is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway. A constant supply of manures, coals, &c., and facility for the transmission of agricultural produce, are amongst the advantages which this line affords the town and neighbourhood. The town was once famed for the weaving of fine linen, introduced by an Irish manufacturer in the year 1768, and the quantity annually manufactured used to amount to £30,000 or £40,000, but since the beginning of this century this branch of industry has gradually decreased. It is now a place of no particular manufacture, and the trade is merely local and domestic.

There are besides the parish and Free churches, several other places of worship in Huntly and its vicinage for the various religious denominations, of which a list with their officiating ministers is appended; among them is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. Several public and charitable educational establishments are well sustained, and conducted with ability. The Gordon schools, opened in 1841, were founded by her late Grace of that title, in 1839, and are situated near to the Lodge, formerly the residence of that lady. The school premises, which are handsome, are at the present time (1888), being enlarged and fitted with all modern school appliances and apparatus, under a new scheme, propounded by the Educational Endowment Commissioners of Scotland, providing accommodation for a general public school and a senior department, the nucleus of which is formed of the Brander foundationers, and those whose education is paid for from the funds of the newly reformed Gordon Trust. A home for the aged, founded and endowed by the late Alexander Scott, Esq., of Craibstone House, affords an asylum for the aged destitute of both sexes. Markets for cattle are held on the first and third Wednesday of every month. A sheep fair is likewise held on the Thursday before the second Tuesday in August (O.S.) Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Thursday before the 26th of May, the second Thursday in July, and the Thursday before the 2nd November. Population of parish in 1881, 4,388, of which the town contained 3,519.

CAIRNEY is a tolerably extensive parish, contiguous to that of Huntly, lying chiefly in the county of Banff. The land for the most part is mountainous, but much of it is, notwithstanding, in a high state of cultivation, and bears prolific crops. Population of the parish in 1881, 1,505.

FORGUE is a parish 9 miles in length, and its greatest breadth about 6; its situation is 4 miles N.E. of Huntly, and it is intersected by two rivulets—the Fendraught and the Forgue. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish. The places of worship are Established, Free, and Episcopal churches, the latter consecrated in 1858 and dedicated to St. Margaret; there are also several public schools. YTHAN WELLS is a quoad sacra parish containing a church of the Establishment and public schools. Acreage, 17,354. Population in 1881, 2,422.

The parish of GLASS is likewise adjacent to that of Huntly on the west, and is also in both counties, lying on either side of the river Deveron. Here is Blairmore House, the seat of Alexander Geddes, Esq., a recent erection in the castellated style. Population of parish in 1881, 654.

DRUMBLADE parish extends from 5 to 6 miles in length and from 4 to 5 in breadth. There are three tumuli, near one of which are the remains of an encampment of King Robert Bruce, after he had defeated Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near the burgh of Inverurie. The soil is generally fertile, and the surface greatly diversified. There are Established and Free churches and a public school. Population of parish in 1881, 943.

The parish of GARTLY, partly in Aberdeenshire and partly in Banffshire, is of an irregular oval figure, extending about 12 miles in length by 6 in breadth. The Great North of Scotland Railway has a station at the southern extremity of the parish. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and there are also public schools, one of which is a modern erection, occupying a central position. The Duke of Richmond is sole proprietor of this extensive tract. An excellent quarry of blue slate is in the parish, and the hills afford peat in abundance. Improvements in agriculture have been actively progressing for some years past. Population of parish in 1881, 889.

INSCH,

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH, CULSALMOND, DAVIOT, LESLIE, MEIKLE WARTLE, OYNE, PITCAPLE, PREMNAY, RAYNE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INSCH is a burgh of barony in the Upper Garioch district, 27 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway. The parish extends five miles in length, by three in breadth, and is bounded by Culsalmond on the east, Kinnethmont on the west, and separated by the water of Urie from Drumblade and Forgue. The village, which is lighted with gas, has two banking establishments and a savings bank, and there are also a church of the Establishment, a Free church, a Congregational chapel, and a public school. An Episcopalian service is conducted in the Public Hall on Sundays. On the top of the hill of Dun-i-Deer are the ruins of an old castle. In the most elevated part of the hill of Foudland, within this parish, are quarries of blue slate. There is a good hotel and posting house at the Railway station. ROTHNEY village is close to the station. Markets are held on the fourth Monday of every month, and feeing markets in May and November. BAINSHOLE is an outlying part of the parish, 6 miles N. from Insch. Acreage, 8,370. Population in 1881, 1,536.

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH is an extensive parish lying in the centre of the county, 20 miles from Aberdeen, 18 from Huntly, and 5 from Inverurie. It is 13 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, embracing an area of 13,059 acres, the river Don dividing it on the south from Kemnay. The castle of Balquhain, now in ruins, in this parish, is famed for an echo. There is also a very singular sculptured stone called "the Maiden Stone." The parish church is situated in the small village of its name, about a mile from Pitcaple station, and at the southern extremity of the parish is the chapel of Blairdaff. The other places of worship are a Free church, near the station mentioned, and a Roman Catholic church at Fetternear; there are also three public schools in the parish. In this district was fought the battle of Harlaw, in 1411, between Alexander, Earl of Mar, and Donald, Lord of the Isles. Buchanan relates that the number of nobility who fell in this obstinately-contested action was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before. Population in 1881, 1,923.

CULSALMOND parish is distant from Huntly 10 miles, and from Aberdeen 28. Newton House, the seat of Alexander M. Gordon, Esq., is the principal residence in this parish, which extends about 3 miles both in breadth and length. The parish church occupies an elevated site near the village of Colpy. The other places of worship are Free and Episcopal churches and a Congregational chapel; there are also public schools. An annual fair, chiefly for horses, is held at ST. SAIRS on Wednesday after last Tuesday in June (old style). Acreage, 6,994. Population in 1881, 828.

DAVIOT, a parish in the district of Garioch, is 21 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 5 miles from Inverurie, and is about 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth; the surface is level, and has a south-eastern exposure. It has two druidical temples, one of which forms part of the churchyard. The houses of Glack and of Mounie and the estate of Lethenty are also in this parish. The small village of DAVIOT contains a church of the Establishment and a public school. Acreage, 4,454. Population in 1881, 515.

LESLIE, a parish in the district of Garioch, is watered by the small river Gadie, a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston in his elegant Latin poems, and in a familiar Scotch song. Here is the fine old ruin of Leslie Castle. Several remains of druidical temples, cairns, and an ancient encampment are pointed out. The parish church and a public school are seated near the river side. DUNCANSTONE is a detached part of the parish, lying about 4 miles from Insch. The only place of worship here is a Congregational chapel. Acreage, 4,444. Population in 1881, 523.

OYNE, a parish likewise in Garioch district, is of an irregular figure, stretching about 6 miles in length, by from 2 to 3 in breadth; the high hill of Benachie lying within it. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line here. Aberdeen is about 25 miles distant, and Huntly 14. Petmathen House, the residence of Major Thomas Leith, is within a short distance of the railway station, and near to it is West Hall, the seat of General R. W. Disney Leith. Here are Established and Free churches, and there is also a public school. In this parish are the ruins of an old castle, believed to have belonged to the family of Leith. A detached part of the parish, Tillyfour, lies along the river Don. Here is Tillyfour Castle, the seat of Francis Robert Gregson, Esq. J.P. Acreage, 10,131. Population in 1881, 962.

PREMNAY parish is 25 miles from Aberdeen, and extends 4 miles in length, by from one to two in breadth. It is bounded by Insch on the north, Oyne on the east, Tough and Keig on the south, and lies on the north side of the hill of Benachie. The castle of Licklichead is in this parish. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches, and there is also a public school. AUCHLEVEN is a small village in this parish about 2 miles from Insch. Acreage, 5,431. Population in 1881, 980.

RAYNE parish lies on the left bank of the Urie, betwixt Culsalmond on the north-west and Daviot and the Chapel of Garioch on the south-east. It extends about 4½ miles from the Urie, by a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles, and covers an area of 7,885 acres. Except a small eminence, covered with heath, on the north side of the parish, the surface is flat, with a few rising spots on the banks of the Urie. The district on the whole has a pleasing appearance, and is ornamented by plantations. In the central part of the parish stands the village of Rayne, and on the public road along the Urie is the post village of OLD RAYNE, distant 25 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 9 from Inverurie; it is in Rayne that the parish church is situated. There are three public schools in the parish. An annual fair is held on the second Wednesday in August. The small village of MEIKLE WARTLE is about 2½ miles east from the Kirk of Rayne, and half a mile distant from Wartle station on the Macduff and Turriff branch of the Great North of Scotland Railway. Population in 1881, 1,284.

PITCAPLE is a small village in the parish of Chapel of Garioch, and a station on the Great North of Scotland line. Pitcaple Castle is the seat of Col. Henry Lumsden, D.L., J.P. Near it is the house of Logie Elphinstone, the seat of Sir Graeme D. H. Elphinstone, Bart.

INVERURIE AND KINTORE,

KEITH HALL, KINMUICK, KINKELL, PORT ELPHINSTONE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERURIE is a parish of 4,946 acres, lying at the termination of the peninsula between the river Urie on the north and the Don on the south. The town, which is a royal burgh, is 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, 22 S.W. of Huntly, and 5 W. by S. of Old Meldrum; pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confluence of the streams before mentioned. Tradition reports that Inverurie was erected into a royal burgh by King Robert Bruce on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him in the neighbourhood over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverurie had been a royal burgh from time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and four councillors; and is included in the Parliamentary division of the Elgin Burghs. A Town Hall was erected here in 1862; it is a handsome structure of light-grey granite, containing public hall, market hall, council chamber, committee room, public library and museum, &c.; the cost was nearly £3,000. Inverurie confers the title of baron on the Earl of Kintore, who has a fine mansion, Keith Hall, a little to the east of the town. By means of the influence and under the patronage of this noble family, a bridge was erected in 1791 over the Don, at an expense of £2,000, and subsequently another was carried over the Urie. The Bass of Inverurie, a conical mount, 50 or 60 feet high, overhangs the isolated churchyard situated near it. The Bass appears to have been the site of the chief castle of the Earls of Garioch, as early as about the year 1200. The field in which it stands is still called the Castle yards of Inverurie. The Town and County, the North of Scotland, and the Union Banking Companies have each a very respectable branch establishment here, and there is also a Savings Bank. Inverurie has become a favourite resort during the summer months, the Don and the Urie affording ample sport to the angler. The Kintore Arms Hotel is replete with every comfort, and visitors have also the privilege of fishing in the above rivers. The opening of the Great North of Scotland Railway from Aberdeen to Inverness, which has a station here, and a branch line to Old Meldrum, gave a new stimulus to industry, and the town, which is well lighted with gas, and is now amply supplied with good water, brought from the lands of Keith Hall, has a thriving appearance. At the contiguous village of PORT ELPHINSTONE are established meal and paper mills, and a brewery; here also have been erected several prettily-situated residences.

The places of worship in the parish are Established and Free churches, Episcopalian, Independent, Methodist, and Roman Catholic chapels. A Free church was erected in 1876, on the left hand side of West High street. A free school, under the management of the office bearers of the Free church, is respectably attended. A school built by Mr. William Clark is also well attended. It is placed under the management of the magistrates. Markets are held every third Tuesday, those for 1888 being held January 17; February 7; February 28 (feeing market); March 20 (F. M. married servants); April 10; May 1; May 22; Wednesday, May 23 (feeing market); June 12; July 3; July 10 (day before St. Sairs); July 24; August 14; September 4; September 25; October 16; November 6; November 20 (feeing market); November 27; Thursday, December 13 (Christmas market); and December 18. The markets from the 1st April to the end of September, are held on the market stance, North street; and from the 1st of October to the end of March, in Market place. Population of the parish in 1881, 3,038.

KINTORE is likewise a royal burgh, and gives it name to the parish, which comprises 9,092 acres. The town, which is small, is 12½ miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and between 3 and 4 S.E. from Inverurie, situated on the public road near the Don. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, which is also the junction for Alford. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by a council of eight other burgesses; and is in the same parliamentary division as Inverurie. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I. after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverurie; and within the parish are the ruins of Hall Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert, now the property of the Earl of Kintore, to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. Two churches, respectively of the Established and Free, with two Board schools and a General Assembly school, are in the parish. The North of Scotland Bank, Limited, have here a branch establishment. The markets formerly held here have been discontinued. PORT ELPHISTONE, which is noticed under the head of Invorurie, is in this parish. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,327; 661 of this number belonging to the town.

KEITH HALL and KINKELL form a united parish of 7,601 acres, in the district of Garioch, lying on the left banks of the Urie and Don, which rivers unite opposite its centre. It is recorded that many who fell in the battle of Harlaw were buried at Kinkell, which, at that period, was the principal church in this part of the county. The Earl of Kintore has a seat in this parish. At KINMUICK, in this parish, the Society of Friends established themselves about the year 1662. The present meeting house was probably built about 1681, and formerly contained accommodation for a school and residence for the master. It has since been improved, and contains a free library with many ancient and modern works, illustrative of the history and doctrines of the Society. Their burial ground is near it, on the opposite side of the road. Population in 1881, 880.

MONYMUSK,

CLUNY, KEMNAY, FETTERNEAR, TILLYFOURIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MONYMUSK parish is about 7 miles long and from 4 to 5 broad, with an area of 10,728 acres, and is distant 8 miles s.w. from Inverurie. Monymusk House, the seat of Sir Arthur Grant, Bart., is situated on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations. The village is built in the form of a square, with the parish church in the centre, a part of which is believed to have been erected about the time of Malcolm Canmore. There was formerly an ancient priory beside it. The estate is remarkable for its fine timber, some larch and fir trees near the river being of unusual size. The Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland line has a station about half a mile from the village. TILLYFOURIE, where are extensive granite quarries, is also a station on this line. Population in 1881, 1,155.

CLUNY parish is in the district of Kincardine-O'Neil, situated between the Dee and the Don waters, distant 18 miles w. from Aberdeen and 8 s.s.w. from Inverurie. In length it is about 10 miles, and in breadth from 2 to 3 miles. Four-fifths of the parish are under cultivation. There are three druidical remains and several cairns in this district, besides two large castles—Castle Fraser, said to have been erected in the beginning of the 15th century, and Cluny Castle, the chief part of which is a handsome modern erection. Linton House is also in this parish. There are ruins of a large castle at Tillycairn. Acreage 9,741. Population in 1881, 1,298.

KEMNAY parish is 4½ miles in length, and 3 in breadth. The village is distant 15 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 5 s.w. from Inverurie, and is a station on the Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland Railway. The house of Kemnay is delightfully situated, and at a short distance from it, on the other side of the river Don, is the house of Fetternear, the seat of the Leslies of Balquhain. The Kemnay quarries are worked for a beautiful blue granite, suitable both for building and polishing purposes. In the village are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a public school. Acreage, 5,110. Population in 1881, 1,636.

NEW AND OLD DEER,

AUCHNAGATT, FETTERANGUS, LONGSIDE, MINTLAW, MAUD, STEWARTFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS

NEW DEER parish lies almost in the centre of Buchan district, and extends fourteen miles from north to south, and about seven in breadth. At NEW MAUD, about three miles from New Deer, is a railway station, and there are also stations at MINTLAW and LONGSIDE. The village, which is well built, is situated about thirty miles north from Aberdeen. The places of worship in the parish are the parish church, a Free church, and a Congregational chapel in the village of NEW DEER, and one each of the Establishment at NEW MAUD and SAVOCH. There are also Presbyterian churches at WHITEHILL and ARTAMFORD. The educational requirements of the parish are well supplied by public schools. About two miles from the church stands an old castle, called Federate, which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few remains of druidical temples, and several tumuli; these having been opened were found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins. Three miles from New Deer is Brucklay Castle, built in the year 1540, the seat of Mrs. Christina Dingwall Fordyce. The situation of the castle is most romantic, and the scenery delightful; the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is beautified and encircled by the waters of the Ugie. Many parts of the castle have been re-built, adding greatly to its beauty. A market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the third Wednesday in January, Wednesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 26th, or 26th if Thursday, of May, Wednesday after 19th of June, second Tuesday in August, Wednesday after 19th of October, and Thursday before 22nd, or 22nd if Thursday, of November. Acreage 26,750. Population of the entire parish in 1881, 4,875.

OLD DEER parish is ten miles in length, by a mean breadth of between five and six, and comprises 27,363 acres. Like New Deer, it lies in the district of Buchan, and contiguous to the former parish. The village is situated some five or six miles distant, 10½ west from Peterhead, and 30 north from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road, and has places of worship in connection with the Established and Episcopalian churches. This parish also contains the village of FETTERANGUS, about three miles from the village of Old Deer, in the county of Banff, in which are Established and Presbyterian churches; and also the village of STEWARTFIELD, which is one mile from Old Deer, and at which place the Free Church, Presbyterians, and Independents have churches. At ARDALIE is a church of the Establishment, and at CLOLA one belonging to the Free Church. In the parish are eight public schools. A branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish about its centre, whilst another branch enters it for a short course on the north; upon these streams are several mills. The abbey of Dee, which stands about a mile from the village, was built in the beginning of the 13th century, by William Comyn, the Earl of Buchan; it is mostly in ruins, but there is still enough remaining to show what it originally was. There were at one time no less than twelve druidical temples, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining. The Druid's temple at BIFFIE is the most conspicuous, and is an object of great attraction to the antiquarian and traveller. The pleasure grounds and woods of Pitfour will at once arrest the admiration of strangers. Near the village of Old Deer is a cemetery, which was opened in 1875. A fair is held at Aiky Brae on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Old Deer on the first Wednesday after the 19th of December. The population of the whole parish in 1881 was 5,104.

LONGSIDE, also a parish in Buchan, contains the village of its name, which latter is about 30 miles north of Aberdeen, 6 west of Peterhead, and 4 east from Old Deer. A handsome church was opened here on the 7th of August, 1886; an Episcopalian church, a Free church, and public schools are also in the village. The village of MINTLAW, in this parish, is 3 miles from Longside, on the road leading from Aberdeen and Fraserburgh. Cattle markets are held at Longside on the second Thursday after the second Tuesday in every month. Feeing fairs are held on the second Thursday in May and the second Tuesday in November. Acreage of the parish, 16,836. Population in 1881, 3,222.

NEW MACHAR,

BELHELVIE, FINTRAY AND UDNY.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, lying chiefly in Aberdeenshire, but partly in the county of Banff; it extends nine miles in length, by two and a half in breadth, and has an area of 9,002 acres. The parish kirk is situated in the village of SUMMERHILL, ten miles from Aberdeen, where there is also a Free church and a public school. The New Machar station of the Great North of Scotland Railway is just out of the village. The country is generally rather flat, and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of wet mossy land; while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. There is a small lake near the boundary of Old Machar, called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island, whereon stand the ruins of a castle once belonging to the Bishops of Aberdeen. Population in 1881, 1,505.

FINTRAY parish is five miles in length, by from three to four in breadth. On the banks of the Don the land is fertile and susceptible of profitable cultivation, but other parts are hilly. An abbey formerly existed in this parish. The Rev J. Leslie, a late minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386, supposed to have formed a fraction of the building, and a silver cup, dated 1633, which tradition records to have been manufactured from the silver of the image of St. Meddin, the tutelar saint of the parish. The kirk is about ten miles and a half from Aberdeen. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line of Kinaldie, about one mile from the village of Hatton. Acreage, 7,319. Population in 1881, 1,082.

UDNY parish extends about five miles in length and breadth, and contains a neat and pleasantly situated village, 14 miles N. of Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. The soil of the parish is for the most part fertile, and the land enclosed and well cultivated. There is a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and two public schools in the parish, and a station near the village on the Great North of Scotland Railway. Fairs are held at Udny station the last Thursday in every month Acreage, 11,548. Population in 1881, 1,638.

BELHELVIE is a coast parish in the district of Formartine, eight miles from Aberdeen. The aspect of the country is very unfavourable, especially at a distance from the sea coast, where it exhibits nothing but heath and stones; towards the sea, however, there is some arable land. The places of worship are the parish church and one for United Presbyterians. Acreage, 12,184. Population in 1881, 1,850.

NEWHILLS,

WITH AUCHMILL, DYCE, AND KINELLAR.

NEWHILLS parish is of an irregular hexagonal form, six miles and a half in diameter, distant from Aberdeen five miles, the river Don forming its boundary on the north-east. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and towards the west becomes mountainous.

AUCHMILL is a village in the above parish, distant from Aberdeen four miles. Here are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. Alexander Pirie & Sons, Limited, and Messrs. Charles Davidson & Sons, Limited. STONEYWOOD and BUXBURN are also small villages adjoining, at each of which are stations on the Great North of Scotland Railway. In the parish are also large granite quarries. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, and one for Episcopalians, and there are also public schools. The parish has an area of 10,282 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 5,480.

DYCE parish is of considerable extent, lying on the south bank of the Don, which river separates it from Fintray, and Newhills parish divides it from Old Aberdeen. The Tyre-begar ridge runs through the district from south to north, one of the loftiest hills being surmounted by a druidical temple. The parish kirk is seven and a half miles from Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. There is also a Free church and good school accommodation within the parish. The Great North of Scotland Railway Company have a station at the village of Dyce. Acreage of the parish, 5,237; population in 1881, 1,162.

KINELLAR is a small parish on the south side of the Don, on the Inverness road, distant from Aberdeen about eight miles and a half; it comprises an irregular assemblage of hills of considerable elevation, the summits of which are covered with small plantations of firs. There are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and two public schools in the parish, which also contains the village of BLACKBURN, and at KINALDIE is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway. The acreage of the parish is 4,217, and its population in 1881 was 580.

POST OFFICE, AUCHMILL, James C. Henderson, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Aberdeen) at 5 30 and 10 35 a.m. and 4 55 p.m., and are despatched thereto at 11 10 a.m. and 2 55, 3 40 and 6 10 p.m.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

OLD MELDRUM, BOURTIE AND TARVES.

OLD MELDRUM is a parish, a burgh of barony, and a market town—the latter pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, 18 miles N.W. of the former, 27 S.E. from the latter, and 5 N.E. from Inverurie. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out, but of late have been much improved. The principal public buildings are the Town Hall, which has a neat tower, with an illuminated clock, and the public school. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two bailies; B. C. Urquhart, Esq., is superior of the burgh. The seat of this gentleman (Meldrum House), is romantically situated, and, from its antique style of architecture, possesses a striking effect; and being surrounded with fine scenery, presents the characteristics of a delightful residence. The principal branches of business are composed in an extensive distillery, a brewery, and corn mills. The district is partly arable and partly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow and less fruitful. The places of worship are the Established, Free, United Presbyterian, and Episcopal churches. The market is held every other Tuesday. Acreage, 8,102. Population in 1881, 2,254.

BOURTIE, a parish, four miles in length and two in breadth, and covering 5,693 acres, is generally cultivated; it lies between Meldrum and Inverurie. About the middle of the parish there are two ranges of hills—the greater part clothed with refreshing verdure. The remains of ancient fortifications are visible throughout this district. There is a church of the Establishment and a public school within the parish. Population in 1881, 463.

The parish of TARVES lies between Ellon and Old Meldrum, being four miles distant from the latter place, is bounded by Methlick on the north and Old Meldrum on the west, and is watered in its eastern quarter by the river Ythan; its length is about nine miles, and its breadth six, and embraces an area of 16,303 acres. The general outline of the parish is a flat surface, interspersed with some hills of inferior altitude. The soil is diversified in its composition, but is for the most part fertile, and there are some fine plantations on the verge of the river. BARTHOL CHAPEL and CRAIGDAM are hamlets in this parish, at the former of which is a church of the Establishment and a public school, and at the latter a United Presbyterian church and a public school. Population in 1881, 2,558.

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BODDAM, BUCHANHAVEN, BURNHAVEN, INVERNETTIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea-port town, a burgh of barony, and parish within the district of Buchan, 141 miles N. by W. of Edinburgh, 84 S.E. of Banff, 32 N.E. of Aberdeen, 18 S.S.E. of Fraserburgh, and 524 miles from London. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross, and is divided into four districts called the Kirktown, Ronheads, Keith Inch, and Peterhead Proper. The houses, which are built of granite (so abundant in various parts of the country), are all of them neat, and many of them commodious and elegant. The town is gas-lighted, and the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with excellent spring water. In years gone by the wells of Peterhead were much frequented; the waters are chalybeate and are abundant in the town and neighbourhood. Fossil shells in great quantities, and of various kinds, are found in the neighbourhood, twenty or thirty feet above the level of the sea, and these of kinds not to be met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. The ruins of Inverugie Castle are situated about 2¼ miles from Peterhead. The walls of this castle are still standing, and by means of a winding staircase in one of the towers, an ascent may be made to the roof, and a beautiful view of the valley of the Ugie obtained. The ruined castle of Ravenscraig stands on the opposite side of the river, about a quarter of a mile from Inverugie Castle. It is built upon a rock, and is a very good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style, in the square form so common to the beginning of the 13th century. Its walls are of such strength that, previous to the use of artillery, they would have rendered the place impregnable. Numerous elegant buildings have within recent years been erected in the centre of the town. The Court House, a handsome building of granite, is in Queen street, in which the sheriff's court is held weekly, on Friday. A public building which claims particular attention is the Town House, at the head of the principal street. It is an elegant edifice, 60 feet long and 49 feet wide, with a spire 125 feet high, and a fine illuminated clock. The town hall, one of the apartments, is a spacious room. The Music Hall buildings, a large and beautiful pile, comprising upper and lower halls, small halls and convenient ante-rooms, &c., with fine shops on the ground floor, and the new lines of houses in Chapel street and Queen street, add much to the attraction and importance of the town. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony by George, Earl Marischal, in the year 1593; but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family, in consequence of their adherence to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased with the neighbouring lands, by the York Building Company in 1726, but that concern being dissolved, it was bought by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh, for £3,000, who are still the superiors. In front of the town hall and facing the main street, has been erected a pedestal of granite, on which has been placed a magnificent statue in bronze of Field-Marshal James Francis Edward Keith, born at Inverugie, in 1696, which statue was presented, by request, to the borough of Peterhead, by King William I. of Prussia, in 1868. The pedestal bears the following inscription:—"Field-Marshal Keith, born at Inverugie, 1696: killed at the battle of Hochkirchen, 14 October, 1758. The gift of William I. King of Prussia, to the town of Peterhead. August, 1868. Probus vixit, fortis obit."

Peterhead is governed by a provost and magistrates and town council. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in the superiors of the town and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuars, but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh, the magistrates and councillors are elected by the householders therein. The town now enjoys the privileges of a Parliamentary burgh, and in conjunction with Kintore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff and Inverurie, returns one member for Parliament—the present member being Alexander Asher, Esq. Upon the county of Aberdeen being divided into an Eastern and Western Division, and returning two members to Parliament, Peterhead was created the returning burgh for the eastern division, and is known as the capital of Buchan, or East Aberdeenshire.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first Parliament of King Charles II. an act was passed "for a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an act of the Scottish Privy Council was obtained for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and bewest of the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739, the convention of royal burghs authorised a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, acts of Parliament were obtained for their further improvements. In recent years very large sums have been expended on the harbours, and when the contemplated works are finished, Peterhead will possess one of the finest and safest harbours to be found along the whole of the east coast of Scotland. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of whom are elected annually from among the proprietors of land and heritages in the burgh, the ship owners, and shore due ratepayers. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal; no individual or body of persons have any pecuniary interest in them. In 1884 Peterhead was selected as the site of a national harbour of refuge for the Scotch coast, to be constructed by convict labour, and a large convict prison has since been erected, to which after the present (1888) year, all Scotch convicts will be drafted. The Harbour of Refuge Works are also being prosecuted on an extensive scale and employ a large amount of free labour. At present Peterhead possesses the grand advantage of north and south harbours, respectively of eleven and seven acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is an elegant and permanent cast-iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £8,000 was expended. In the north harbour there are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance to both harbours are good lighthouses. Adjacent to the north harbour is also the recently built boat harbour of Port Henry. The South Bay, which is the site of the projected harbour of refuge, has good anchorage. The revenue of the harbours in 1800 was only £100, while in 1849 it amounted to £4,000; in 1858, to £4,391 19s. 7d.; in 1875, upwards of £8,000; in 1881 the income was over £10,000; and in 1884, upwards of £11,000; since then, however, owing to the depression in the local fisheries, it has to some extent declined. In no object is this community more deeply interested than in the whale and sea fisheries, many having their capital largely invested, and others their friends and relatives engaged in this important but hazardous branch of industry. More than eighty years have now elapsed since the first vessel sailed from Peterhead for the icy regions; and while many other ports have been declining, and some have given up the trade altogether, Peterhead has still continued it, and holds a high position among the British ports in the whale fishery. In the year 1788 one vessel was sent out, and up to 1803 there was no increase. From 1804 to 1814 the number varied from two to eight, and to 1830 from ten to sixteen; but in 1843 it had decreased to nine. After that date the number again increased, but within the last twenty years it has considerably declined, and at present owing to the exhaustion of the Arctic fishing grounds, the industry is threatened with extinction. The herring fishery, which was commenced here in 1818 by a joint stock company, has become important, Peterhead having now attained the first rank in this branch of maritime industry. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades, the town enjoys a good local trade. There are also two extensive and prosperous granite polishing establishments, employing upwards of 100 men, and Peterhead granite has attained considerable popularity throughout the world. Between the years 1817 and 1822 inclusive, 35,112 tons of this stone were shipped at Peterhead, chiefly in large blocks, for the docks at London; but since that period the exportation has considerably decreased. The quarries are largely worked by Aberdeen polishing firms. The Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland Railway, opened in 1862, connected Peterhead with Fraserburgh and Aberdeen.

The Established church, situated at the conjunction of the south and west roads, combines elegance with convenience, and has a fine spire. There are also three quoad-sacra chapels in Queen street, Boddam, and at Blackhill. The Episcopal church is a handsome modern edifice, in the design of which the architect has displayed considerable taste. The other places of worship include two for the Free Church, a chapel erected in 1870 for Independents, a United Presbyterian church, a chapel for Methodists, a Baptist meeting house, and a chapel for Roman Catholics; the last named is one of the best specimens of architecture in the town. The governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, of Edinburgh, proprietors of the estate at Peterhead, have laid out and enclosed a large space of suitable ground at Peterhead as a public cemetery.

Amongst the literary institutions of the town may be mentioned, as the principal, a Reading Society, established in 1808, and a Mechanics' Institution, founded in 1836. The library belonging to the Reading Society numbers upwards of five thousand volumes, and the library of the Mechanics' Institute about one thousand. There is also a solicitors' library. A very valuable museum, collected by the late Adam Arbuthnot, Esq., by whom it was bequeathed to the authorities for the use of the town, contains a great variety of specimens from the animal and mineral kingdoms, while the collection of coins is one of the most complete to be met with. The museum is under the care and management of the magistrates and town council, and a scheme is at present on foot to provide a building for its accommodation, and as the nucleus of a science and art museum. There are also several excellent schools. There are two newspapers published here—the Peterhead Sentinel, established in 1856 (the proprietor, Mr. David Scott, having published several interesting works connected with the district), and the East Aberdeenshire Observer, both creditably conducted, and enjoying an encouraging circulation in the district of Buchan. Both are issued twice a week. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November. The population of the burgh was in 1871, 8,621, and in 1881, 10,953.

BODDAM is a neat village and considerable fishing station, in the parish of Peterhead, about four miles south of that town. The harbour here was extended a few years since by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and an act of Parliament was passed in 1845, constituting Boddam a port or harbour. Some years ago the estate of Boddam was purchased from the Earl of Aberdeen by William Aiton, Esq., who lives on the estate. The fishery here is prosecuted with great diligence and success. Boddam is a quoad-sacra parish, and in the village are an Established church, a Free church, a public hall, and a Board school. The population in 1881 was 1,117.

BUCHANHAVEN is a small fishing village within the burgh of Peterhead.

BURNHAVEN and INVERNETTIE are two small villages in the parish of Peterhead, situated about half way between that town and Boddam, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen. At Invernettie are the very extensive works of the Glenugie Distillery.

RHYNIE AND ESSIE,

AUCHINDOIR AND KEARN, WITH LUMSDEN, CABRACH, CLATT, AND KENNETHMONT.

RHYNIE and ESSIE is a united parish in the district of Strathbogie, comprehending an area of 30 square miles, and bounded on the north by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir, and on the west by Cabrach. The centre may be about 10 miles south from Huntly. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. The only antiquity in this parish deserving of notice is a vitrified fort on the top of the hill of Noth. There are two springs in the neighbourhood of Rhynie, remarkable for the surprising quantity of water they discharge, each being capable of turning a mill at its source. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and a chapel belonging to the Congregationalists, and there is also a public school. Feeing markets are held on the Mondays before the 26th of May and the 22nd of November, and cattle markets are held from November to May, on the Saturday before the fourth Monday in each month, and the day after Keith in September, and the day after Kennethmont in October. In 1881 the parish, which covers an area of 12,897 acres, contained a population of 1,126 persons, and the village 442.

AUCHINDOIR, a parish with which KEARN has been incorporated, is about 7 miles long and 5 broad, distant from Huntly 12 miles, the acreage being 15,310. A bluish coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks. The parish also abounds with freestone. The only river of note is the Bogie, There are Established and Episcopalian churches and a public school, and at LUMSDEN, a small village in this parish, erected within the last fifty years and named after the proprietor, are a Union Free church, and a public school. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, and third Tuesday in August. Population of the parish in 1881, 1,514.

CABRACH parish is partly in the county of Aberdeen and partly in that of Banff, extending in length 5 miles by about 3 in breadth, distant from Aberdeen 45 miles, and from Huntly 20. In the parish are an Established church, one in connection with the United Presbyterians, and two public schools. The Deveron and the Fidditch water this parish. The mountains abound with game. Acreage, 34,103. Population in 1881, 682.

CLATT is a parish of 5,711 acres. The village is situated 10 miles S.S.E. from Huntly, and 33 W.N.W. from Aberdeen on the rivulet Gaudie, which afterwards falls into the Urie. It is a burgh with power to hold weekly and annual markets. The superiority belongs to the family of Gordon, of Knockespock. The only place of worship is a church under the Establishment, and there is also a public school. Population of the parish in 1881, 452.

KENNETHMONT parish extends about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and is about 8 miles south from Huntly. The parish, the extent of which is 8,468 acres, is watered by several small streams, and generally the soil is fertile. Here are Established and Free churches. Population of the parish in 1881, 999.

ROSEHEARTY IN PITSLIGO,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF SANDHAVEN, PITTULIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ROSEHEARTY is a maritime village and burgh of barony, in the parish of Pitsligo, 4¼ miles W. from Fraserburgh and 18 E. from Banff. It has a good harbour, capable of admitting vessels of from eighty to one hundred tons, which, during the last few years, has been considerably extended. The chief imports are timber, coals and salt, and it exports fish and grain; its commerce, however, is not extensive. Although inconsiderable in size, it is a burgh of barony, having been raised to that distinction by a charter of Charles II. dated July 13th, 1681. The places of worship are the Established church at Pitsligo, and a Free church and one for the United Presbyterians at Rosehearty. The parish of PITSLIGO lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea coast, betwixt Aberdour on the west and Fraserburgh on the east, and commencing about two miles west of Kinnaird Head. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of Lord Pitsligo (a title in the Forbes family), is an ancient structure, now in ruins, surrounded with extensive gardens. The labouring portion of the population in the parish are principally employed in fishing, and others in agriculture. SANDHAVEN and PITTULIE are two small villages in this parish, both situated between Kinnaird Head and Rosehearty Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. There is a good harbour at Sandhaven, which has been considerably enlarged and improved, £20,000 having been expended on it by the proprietor, the Honourable Charles J. R. H. S. Forbes Trefusis. There are several fish curing stations in the village. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and a Free church. A new public school was erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,400. The population of Rosehearty in 1881 was 1,404, and of the entire parish of Pitsligo, the acreage of which is 4,741, 2,582.

STRICHEN, ABERDOUR, TYRIE, AND NEW PITSLIGO.

STRICHEN is a parish in the district of Buchan. The village which is a neat one, is well supplied with water, and there is also a gas company, but the streets are not lighted. It is 33½ miles N. of Aberdeen, 20 W. of Banff, 16 W. by N. from Turriff, 15 N. by W. from Peterhead, and 9 S. from Fraserburgh, situated on the north bank of the Ugie. The town house is a convenient and neat structure, erected in the year 1816, by the Right Hon. Lord Lovat, at an expense of £2,000. On the side of one of the hills in this parish are the figures of a horse and a stag, formed by large pieces of stone, which have a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is a hunter's lodge, on which is inscribed, "This hunter's lodge, Robb Gibb commands." About one mile S.W. from the village is Strichen House, the property of George Alexander Baird, Esq., of Strichen and Stickhill—a substantial building, in the Gothic style, erected in 1820-2; it is surrounded by an extensive park, embracing the finest woods and trees in Buchan district. The Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland Railway passes through this parish, and has a station in the village. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, an Episcopalian church, and an United Presbyterian chapel at New Leeds; also one for the Roman Catholics at Woodside; and there are public, Episcopal and Free schools. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday of every month. Population of Strichen in 1881, 1,204; and of the whole parish, which has an area of 10,183 acres, 2,348.

ABERDOUR parish, 9 miles W. of Fraserburgh, and 16 E. of Banff, stretches along the Moray Firth for about 10 miles, its area being 15,508 acres. The shore here is so bold and precipitous that there are only three places where boats can effect a landing; and the rocks have been excavated by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is ninety feet long and twenty-two broad. Upon a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue, a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1336, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, Regent of Scotland, during the unwarrantable captivity of King Robert Bruce in England. The places of worship are the parish and Free churches, and one belonging the Establishment, recently erected at Auchmedden, there are also three public schools in the parish. The small village of PENNAN, situated on the shore of Aberdour bay, is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Population of Aberdour in 1881, 628; and of the whole parish, 2,124.

TYRIE parish extends about ten miles in length, by four and a half in breadth, and comprises an area of 11,182 acres. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land, and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring eminences. In 1787 Sir William Forbes founded, in the southern quarter of the parish, the village of NEW PITSLIGO, into which the weaving of linen was introduced, but since power-loom weaving began, it gradually decreased, and at the present time there is scarcely any done, but the weaving of pillow lace. Wincey and woollen manufacturing are carried on to a small extent, affording employment to some of its inhabitants. Near the village are a few granite quarries. There is a gas company here, but the streets are not lighted. There is a church of the Establishment, also a handsome Episcopal church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1871, at a cost of about £4,000, the style being early English. The other places of worship are a Free church and a Congregational chapel; there are also public and Episcopal schools. Population of New Pitsligo, in 1881, 2,056; and of the whole parish of Tyrie, 3,391.

TARLAND-MIGVIE,

COULL, AND LOGIE-COLDSTONE.

TARLAND-MIGVIE parish forms a very irregular and disjointed district on the western borders of Aberdeenshire. The village of Tarland—which is a burgh of barony—is 31 miles w. from Aberdeen, 14 S.S.W. from Alford, 6 N.W. from Aboyne, and 12 N.N.E. from Ballater, situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cromar. The lands about the village are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods, which have been planted, will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter inconvenience. A small rivulet runs by the village, and falls into the river Dee, near Aboyne village, and a detached part of the parish is watered by the Don. Branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited, are established in this burgh. There are also an Established and a Free church, two public schools, and a Public Hall and Reading Room. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the 5th of January, and on the 5th if Wednesday, second Wednesday and last Wednesday in February, first Wednesday and Wednesday after 26th in May, Friday after St. Sairs in June, on the Friday after the first Tuesday in August, second Wednesday after first Tuesday in October, Tuesday and Wednesday after 22nd, or on that day if a Tuesday, in November. Acreage, 17,353. Population of the united parish of Tarland-Migvie in 1881, 1,173, and of the village of Tarland, 374.

COULL is a parish in the district of Cromar, the kirk being about 30 miles W. from Aberdeen, lying at the head of Strathcromar, and separated from the Dee on the south by Aboyne. It is a finely sheltered tract of land, triangular in shape, and generally fertile, the hill portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known. Acreage, 9,044. Population in 1881, 783.

LOGIE-COLDSTONE is an agricultural parish, bounded on the east by Tarland-Migvie and Coull, on the south by Dinnet, on the west by Strathdon and Glengairn, and on the north by Towie and Strathdon. Acreage, 13,600. Population in 1881, 908.

TURRIFF,

KING EDWARD, AND NEW BYTH.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony (of which the Earl of Fife is the feudal superior), the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of the parish of that name, 34½ miles N.N.W. of Aberdeen, 17 N.N.W. of Old Meldrum, and 11 S.S.E. of Banff, situate on a tributary stream of the Deveron, near that river. Its charter, dated the 10th of March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff. By this the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the Sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the Town Hall, and justice of peace and police courts when required. In 1858 the householders adopted certain provisions of the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act of 1850, and latterly almost the entire provisions of the more recent act of 1862, in virtue of which the affairs of the burgh are regulated and administered by nine commissioners of police, three of whom are elected annually. These commissioners elect from their own number one senior and two junior magistrates, who in their turn appoint a procurator fiscal and clerk of court, and within their jurisdiction exercise in all cases of petty offences the functions of sheriff and magistrates of police. Turriff is one of the most flourishing little towns in the north of Aberdeenshire. The place is clean and neat, and gas-lighted by a joint-stock company, formed in 1837. In the same year a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, was established here, and subsequently three other banks, all doing a prosperous business. One of these, the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, has erected, at a cost of about £2,000, a handsome building situated at the junction of Main street with High street, the style of architecture being the old Scotch baronial. The stone used is the red sandstone from the quarries in the neighbourhood. The tower contains a clock having dials facing north, south, and west, which is fitted up with self-lighting apparatus, and serves as a town's clock. There are several inns and posting houses. The places of worship are Established, Free, and Episcopalian churches, and there are public and infants' schools, and a private academy in which boarders are received. The vicinage of Turriff is of an agreeable character, and the neighbourhood very respectable; several families of distinction are among the residents. Forglen House, the seat of Sir Robert John Abercrombie, Bart., a few miles distant, is one of the most elegant and imposing mansions in the north of Scotland. Among the industries may be named woollen manufacturing and the curing of pork, &c. Fairs are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, also Saturday before the 27th of May (fecing market), and Saturday before the 23rd of November. The population of the parish of Turriff, the acreage of which is 18,386, was in 1881, 4,343, of which the town contained 2,304.

KING EDWARD is a parish, 5 miles N. from Turriff, in the northern part of the county, 12 miles in length from west to east, by from 2 to 5 in breadth, its western extremity being washed by the Deveron; on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by New Byth, and on the south by Turriff. The general surface is undulating; there are extensive plantations, and the district is advanced in agriculture. A streamlet, tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish, and on its right bank stand the ruins of the ancient castle of King Edward, once the seat of the potent Comyns, Earls of Buchan. Acreage, 18,570. Population in 1881, 3,068.

NEW BYTH, formed into a quoad sacra parish in 1868, is bounded by Gamrie and Aberdour on the north, King Edward on the west, Turriff and Montquhitter on the south, and New Deer and Tyrie on the east. It is composed of part of King Edward, New Deer and Aberdour, and was provided with a chapel in 1793. The village of New Byth is situated about a mile from a public road, the inhabitants being engaged chiefly in agriculture. Excepting towards the north and west, the general aspect of the parish is bleak. Byth House, one of the seats of B. C. Urquhart, Esq. of Old Meldrum, is situated about a mile north of the village, and is surrounded with wood, the only relieving feature of the district. FISHERIE and CRUDIE are places in this parish. Population of the village in 1881, 491.

ARGYLESHIRE,

OR, as it is frequently written Argyllshire, is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands. What may be termed the continental part is bounded on the north by Inverness-shire, on the east by that county and Perthshire and Dumbartonshire, and on the south and west by bays and straits of the Atlantic Ocean. Its extreme length is one hundred and fifteen miles; its breadth averaging about thirty-three, and it has not less than six hundred miles of coast washed by the sea. The mainland, including the peninsula of Kintyre, has been computed to contain 2,735 square miles; while the islands connected with it are supposed to comprise 1,063 more; whereby the whole extent of land in Argyleshire may be estimated at 3,798 square miles. In point of size, Argyleshire ranks as the second county in Scotland, and in population as the twelfth. The county is divided into six principal districts—Argyle Proper, Cowal, Islay, Kintyre (or Cantyre), Lorne, and Mull. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorne; from which, on its south-west quarter, there extends in a southerly direction into the Irish Sea the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura, and Islay are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds, and may be taken from their proximity and accessibility as little else than portions of the mainland, surrounded by salt water rivers. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnamurchan, the most westerly point of Sunart; Appin, a piece of Lorne bordering on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorne on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorne.

Early History.—This county, together with that of Perth, is presumed to have constituted the ancient Caledonian Kingdom, while the Romans and Picts were in possession of the greater part of Scotland. In former ages the western coast of Argyleshire was perpetually exposed to descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, but the original inhabitants never suffered them to penetrate any considerable distance into the interior; if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The heroes celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyleshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. Of old the chieftain was considered the father, rather than the master of his clan; his followers loved him with a degree of enthusiasm which made them cheerfully undergo any fatigue or danger; and it was his interest, as well as his pride and glory, to requite so animated an adherence to the utmost of his power. The rent paid him was chiefly consumed in feasts given at the habitations of his tenants; on these occasions they all lived together as friends, and the departure of the chief always occasioned deep regret. The cattle and corn formerly consumed at these feasts of hospitality were, in more polished times, required to be brought to the landlord's mansion, and thus friendship degenerated into oppression. Campbell of Auchinbreck had anciently a right to carry off the best cow he could find upon several properties each Martinmas, by way of mart—the island of Islay paid five hundred such cows yearly; but this badge of slavery has been converted into a modus of twenty shillings a head. The inconveniences attending this state arose from the petty quarrels between neighbouring clans, excited by a spirit of plunder, and absurd points of fantastical honour. At this period the Scottish kings had no authority over this part of the country; the M'Donalds of the Isles assuming royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. From this time, in their different wars with the English, the chiefs had recourse to the assistance of the Highlanders, with whom, and the inhabitants of the Low country, they contracted debts, rendering the condition of the middle classes worse, as the chiefs found it necessary to require an addition to their yearly revenue; and in order to enforce obedience, recourse was had to penal laws. In this respect the king was obliged to gratify his feudal barons; for they were always formidable to his throne. But when the laws presented any obstacle to their rapacious exactions, they openly set them at defiance; they erected gibbets, and hanged their tenants without trial or mercy. The evil at last became so flagrant, that a jury and bailiff or sheriff were introduced; but this measure did not remove the mischief, for the law officer was not unfrequently bribed to spare the real culprit, while the poorer and more innocent were considered fit subjects for the gallows. In 1748 these abominable jurisdictions were totally abolished; and no sooner were men emancipated from their fetters than they began to improve their properties; and since that time the face and condition of this country has undergone the happiest change. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyleshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue; they were passionately fond of music and poetry, and the song and dance soon made them forget their toils. Now the sound of the bagpipe is more rarely heard; the taste for poetry has disappeared; the deer have abandoned the mountains, and extensive forests are either converted into sheep walks, or have succumbed to modern cultivation.

Soil, Surface, Produce, Climate, &c.—The surface of this county is, like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous, bleak and uncomfortable to the view; hills, rocks, and huge mountains rise upon each other in stupendous and fearful disorder. Glencroe and Glencoe are, perhaps, amongst the most awfully picturesque valleys that can be contemplated. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. From the nature of the county, agriculture is not widespread, but in certain districts in Lorne, near Campbeltown, and in Islay, farming is favourably pursued. The staple corn crop is oats and barley; rye, beans and peas being likewise grown, as are also large quantities of excellent potatoes. The mountains feed immense numbers of sheep, and the cattle bred are of the hardy Highland type and reared for exportation to the Lowland markets. Limestone is abundant, and granite is occasionally met with, whilst near Campbeltown is worked a remarkably productive seam of coal. Lead is wrought in Islay, but the chief mineral is slate, of which there are several quarries, the most extensive being at Ballachulish, and in Easdale, Seil and Luing islands. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated on the face of the country; despoiling it of one of its most interesting features, and finding the introduction of modern plantations but a meagre substitute for the noble forest tree. The county altogether abounds more in romantic scenes than fertile plains and wood-clad hills. The number of acres in tillage bears an insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The Climate of the lower parts of Argyleshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts the atmosphere is severe. On the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, chilling the air and giving the country a cheerless wintry aspect, even in tolerably mild open weather. In the sinuosities of the valleys the air is of a more bland nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southerly exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in Argyleshire are:—Beinnaturk, 2,170; Sliagaoil, 2,228; Beneaton, 2,306; Scur Choinice, 2,364; Beinima, 2,380; Creach Bein, 2,439; Paps of Jura, 2,476; Bennahua, 2,515; Buchael Etive, 2,537; Beareisipoll, 2,661; Benanambrau, 2,720; Scur Dhonuil, 2,730; Bein-More, 3,185; Cruachlassa, 3,000; and Cruachan, 3,670 feet, respectively above the sea.

The Manufactures of Argyleshire are yet in so feeble a state as to be scarcely worthy of notice. The principal article made on a large scale for exportation is whisky, which is of a remarkably fine quality. Campbeltown alone boasts about twenty distilleries, and there are others in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depot. Among the other branches of industry may be named net and rope making, and the manufacture of woollen cloth and gunpowder, for which latter there are several extensive works. From the peculiar form and watery intersection of this county, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam power navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a bay, a loch, or inlet, but holds a daily or commands a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the country. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock which they would never otherwise think of rearing. Steam boats are, in short, the lively cause of every kind of improvement in this county, and in agriculture, changes are yearly witnessed in the different districts, from the modern improvements in husbandry.

Rivers, Lakes, and Railways.—The county is well watered by rivers (not considerable), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated that there were caught in this arm of the sea from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years, the herring having deserted the loch, which has caused the fishing centre to be removed from Tarbert to Campbeltown. Loch Awe (pronounced Loch O), is a beautiful fresh water lake, about twenty-eight miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many lovely woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles. Its waters, which abound with salmon, trout, and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonaw Ferry. There are many smaller lochs, some of them situated amidst grand and mountainous scenery. The only line of railway in this county is the Callander and Oban line, which was opened through to Oban on the 1st July, 1880.

Ecclesiastical Divisions, Representation, &c.—This extensive county is divided, ecclesiastically, into not more than fifty parishes, which contain only two Royal burghs, Inveraray, at the head of Loch Fyne, and Campbeltown, in Kintyre. One member is returned to Parliament for the county, the present representative being Colonel J. Wingfield Malcolm. The burghs of Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Oban, in conjunction with Ayr and Irvine, are also represented, the sitting member being John Sinclair, Esq. The parliamentary constituency for the county was in 1887-88, 9,721. The Duke of Argyll is lord-lieutenant and high sheriff of the county, and is the proprietor of a large portion of the shire; and he is the chief of the family of Campbell, a surname which is found over the whole region, among high and low. His eldest son, the Marquis of Lorne, was, on the 21st day of March, 1871, married to Princess Louise, the fourth daughter of Her Majesty the Queen. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1457 by James III.; to a Marquisate in 1641 by Charles I., and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III. The valuation of the county for 1887-88 (exclusive of burghs, railways, and canals) was £451,036. By the returns made to Government in 1871, the county contained a population of 75,679, and by those for 1881, 76,468.

APPIN AND BALLACHULISH SOUTH,

WITH ARDGOUR, KINGAIRLOCH, AND THE ISLANDS OF LISMORE, SHUNA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

APPIN, or as it is more generally called, PORT APPIN, is a small village in the united parish of Lismore and Appin, and comprised in a district of the latter appellation; situated on the point of a small promontory, on the eastern shore of Loch Linnhe, 13 miles N. of Oban, 15 N.W. of Bonaw, 35 N.W. of Inveraray, 136 N.W. of Edinburgh, and 29 S.W. of Fort William. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms; the village contains very few houses, and is a mile and a half off the main road. About five miles and a half to the north is Appin House, the seat of the late R. Downie, Esq., of Appin; this mansion is surrounded by some of the finest timber on the coast. The estate is at present in the hands of trustees, the heir being a minor. The parish church, which was built in 1649, is centrally situated on the Strath of Appin, a little off the high road, a distance of two miles from Appin pier; and there is a parliamentary church nine miles distant, on the way to Ballachulish South. It is proposed to build a new parish church, and a very central site has been offered by the Laird of Kenlochlaich. The Episcopal church, Portnacroish, stands a short distance from Rose place, on a lovely site, and in its churchyard rest the remains of the the Stewarts of Fasnacloich. The Free church, built in 1846, is a neat little building situated on the south side of the beautiful bay running in past the Castle of Stalker up to Kinlochlaich, which is in the centre of the much admired Strath. The new Strath public school is an imposing structure, and by its situation surveys almost the whole Strath. On a small island near Portnacroish, full two miles north, is the ancient and partly dilapidated castle of Stalker. It is nearly square, of considerable height, and has evidently been a place of some strength; and though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands. About half a mile from the pier, situated in a park on the road to Shian, is Airds House, the residence of Robert M'Fie, Esq., of Airds and Oban, which commands a fine view of the head of Airds Bay. Beyond this, at a distance of a quarter of a mile, is Drumneil House, belonging to Dr. Laurie; it is an ornamental building, of which a good view is presented as the stranger enters Appin on board the steamer from Oban. There are also several other elegant mansions, among which may be named Barriemore House, the residence of Mrs. Campbell; Achnacone House, that of Alexander Stewart, Esq., and Kenlochlaich House, D. H. Campbell-Munro, Esq. There is a pier here where steamers call regularly. The district is principally devoted to agriculture and sheep farming. Fairs are held at CONNEL on Saturday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before the last Wednesday in October, and at CORRAN OF ARDGOUR on third Friday in October. At Duror Inn, five miles from Ballachulish, on the Appin road, a cattle market is held twice yearly. Population of the quoad sacra parish in 1881, 762.

BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a straggling but populous village, on the south shore of Loch Leven, about 3 miles E. of Ballachulish Ferry (in the same parish), and 15½ N. of Port Appin. On a small island opposite the village of Ballachulish are the ruins of an old chapel, supposed to have been built by St. Mungo. The island is now used as a burying ground. GLENCOE is a wild and picturesque mountain pass, on the road from Ballachulish to Dumbarton, and is historically celebrated as being the spot where the massacre of the Macdonalds took place in 1691. There are Established, Episcopal and Free churches here, and also a post office. Near the village of Ballachulish, at the foot of Glencoe hills, are very extensive slate quarries, the property of Lady Beresford and others, of Ballachulish, which give employment to a number of the inhabitants. Within a mile of the quarries westward is an Episcopalian church, the largest in the Highlands, and a small one for the Established Church of Scotland, also one for Roman Catholics. The quoad sacra parish contained in 1881 a population of 1,444 persons.

At BALLACHULISH SOUTH FERRY is a comfortable hotel and posting house, a commodious and handsome building, pleasantly situated. About three-quarters of a mile distant, a pier, with waiting room, &c., has been erected; here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. A sub-post office is also here. In the immediate vicinity, at the entrance of a sequestered valley, is Ballachulish House, the property of Lady Beresford; three miles from which is Ardsheal, the seat of Alexander D. Anderson, Esq. About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, near the opening of a glen exceedingly wild and romantic, and almost embosomed by trees, is Invercoe House, and opposite, on the north shore of the Loch (which is here fully a mile broad), in the county of Inverness, is Callart, the modern mansion of the late Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart., of Fassifern and Callart, contributing in an eminent degree to the beauty of the landscape.

At CORRAN FERRY, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a lighthouse has been erected. Ben Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glencoe.

LISMORE is an island in Loch Linnhe, 10 miles in length by about 2 in breadth; it lies between Appin and Morven, and belongs to the same united parish with the former place. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from hence. The church is situated at the Clachan of Lismore, and is distant from the north point of the island about 3 miles. There is a United Presbyterian church about a mile and a half from ACHNACROISH, and at BACHUIL is a Baptist chapel. There are public schools at BALIGRUNDLE and BALIGARVE. There is a small village on this isolated fertile spot called PORT RAMSAY; and at a southern point on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel, stands a lighthouse, almost in a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light, a catoptric, is on a high rounded pillar of stone masonry, and is an excellent and most useful beacon. A pier has been erected at AUCHNACROISH, at which the mail steamer calls twice daily. On this island are the remains of Doune or Auchindowie Castle, at one time the residence of the bishops of Argyll, the ruins of a Danish fort, and three fresh water lakes, in which there is a good supply of salmon, trout, &c. The principal industries are farming and fishing. Population in 1881, 738.

BONAW, TAYNUILT, ARDCHATTAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BONAW, or BUNAWE, is a small scattered village on the river Awe, 122 miles N.W. of Edinburgh, 80 N.W. of Glasgow, 12 E. of Oban, and 20 N. of Inveraray, by Port Sonachan ferry—but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, it is 32 miles. The manufacture of pig-iron, which at one time flourished here, has now ceased. Bonaw granite quarries, leased by Messrs. Wm. Sim & Co., Glasgow, employ about 200 workmen. Bonaw is much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the fishing season. Large quantities of fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland. The church, which was erected in 1827-8, stands near the road to Inveraray, where also is the parish school. The funds for both these structures were supplied by the munificence of General D. Campbell, of Lochnell. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson, may be seen on an eminence near the village. Since the completion of the Callander and Oban railway, Bonaw is becoming a favourite resort for tourists, several new villas having been built. There is an hotel near to Taynuilt station, and anglers can obtain fishing in the famous salmon river Awe.

At ARDCHATTAN, about four miles N.W. on the opposite side of Loch Etive, stand the remains of an ancient priory of the Benedictines, founded in 1232, by M'Coull, ancestor of the Lords of Lorne. Here Bruce is thought to have held a Gaelic council after the battle of Methven. A church was erected at Ardchattan in 1836, at an expense to the heritors of about £1,000; it contains sittings for four hundred. The objects that most forcibly strike the attention here are Loch Etive and Ben Cruachan—the latter, with its broad shoulders, rearing its blunt-pointed summit 3,670 feet above the salt water that laves his foot. Its circumference at the base is twenty miles. The journey is somewhat fatiguing, but the view obtained from the summit will amply reward the tourist for the trouble of ascending, as it extends over the whole archipelago of the Western Isles from Islay to Skye; previous to rain and other changes of weather, sounds are said to issue from Ben Cruachan. The population of the quoad-sacra parish of Ardchattan was in 1881, 1,390.

Two miles E. of TAYNUILT, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and two miles further is the PASS OF CRUACHAN or BRANDER, where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdougal of Lorne, in 1309. Fairs are held at GLENORCHY on the third Wednesday in March and fourth Tuesday in November; and at CONNEL on Saturday before last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before last Wednesday in October.

CAMPBELTOWN,

WITH SALT-PANS, SADDELL, CARRADALE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal burgh and seaport, 144 miles w. by s. of Edinburgh, and 100 s. w. of Glasgow, by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 s.s.w. of Inverary, 37 s. of Tarbert, 10 N. of Southend, and 6 E. of Salt-Pans, beautifully situated on a fine bay or inlet of the sea. It is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period, Fergus, the first king of Scotland, fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 813. It was then called Dalruhadhain, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by the name, now written Dalarnam; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Ceann Lach (i.e. "head of the Loch"), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic; the present name was given to it in honour of the Duke of Argyll, when it was made a royal burgh in 1701. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Davaar, which is joined to the main land on the south side by a bar of sand, visible at low water, nearly half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. A lighthouse was erected in 1854, on the above island, which is far more efficient than the old one formerly on the shore. On opening into the bay, the stranger's attention is arrested by the grand though wild scenery, particularly on the south side; and the prospect immediately comprises the neat local capital, Campbeltown, situate at the head of Loch Kilkerran. The public buildings are seen towering above the dwelling houses, beyond which the eye is carried for some distance over a fine, fertile, yet mountainous country. From the shore, two quays project into the bay, so as to allow vessels to load and unload at low water. The principal one, appropriated to the convenience of steam boats and heavy vessels, was much improved in 1836, and it has since been lengthened and other alterations made. It is almost on a line with Main street. The other stretches from Shore street, and there is a third quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Dalintober.

Campbeltown formerly derived great advantage from the herring fishery, for which it was particularly famed, but since the withdrawal of the bounty it has somewhat decayed, few vessels being now engaged in the trade. The staple industry at the present time is distilling whisky, and in this branch twenty firms are engaged, producing an article perhaps inferior to none in the kingdom, chiefly for the Glasgow and English houses. Next in consequence, and mainly, if not entirely, dependent for its prosperity on the last-named branch, is malting. Agriculture of late years has risen into great importance. Some of the finest and richest land in this part of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyll and Hector Macneal, Esq. A woollen manufactory, a colliery, a net manufactory, a rope walk, &c. add to the business importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime, stone, &c. for building and other purposes. Few towns of the size of Campbeltown possess equal commercial advantages. The County Building, situate on Castlehill, is a fine stone building in the baronial style. It contains a justice of the peace court, sheriff's court, and the fiscal's offices. It was opened June 1st, 1871, by James Gardiner, Esq., the old sheriff's court, &c. in Bolgam street, being now converted into a Conservative club room and police station. There is also the custom house, an extensive excise establishment, and branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Bank of Scotland, of which two are situated in Main street, and two in Longrow, besides a bank for savings in Bolgam street, which was established in 1827, under the provisions of the Act 59 George III. cap. 62. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow, Greenock, and Ayr, and occasionally to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast, &c. in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels, freighted to Liverpool and other parts of the country. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, fishing nets, live stock, coals, potatoes, &c. The imports are barley, timber, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery, &c. Campbeltown is connected by telegraph with the principal towns and villages in the county, as well as with Glasgow, &c. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and twelve councillors, and combined with Ayr, Inverarray, Irvine and Oban, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament—the gentleman at present sitting being John Sinclair, Esq. The town is lighted by gas, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water by pipes conducted from Lochruan and Crosshill into the principal streets. The Town Hall, a convenient building, ornamented by a handsome spire, contains a council chamber, and an assembly and other rooms Campbeltown is the head-quarters of the Argyll and Bute Artillery Militia, and a large and efficient staff are here permanently stationed; in the town are also an Artillery Volunteer Battery and a Rifle Volunteer Corps. For the latter a large drill hall, called the "Victoria Hall" in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee, was erected in 1887, on part of the site of the old bowling green in Bolgam street, having a frontage to Kinloch road of about 70 feet. In the front on the ground floor is a reading room and orderly room, each 22½ feet by 14 feet. Above this is the dwelling-house of the drill instructor. The hall itself is 110 feet long by 60 feet broad, having a gallery extending across it 15 feet in breadth. Behind the hall are two waiting rooms for ladies and gentlemen, 11 feet by 10 feet. The style of the building is armorial, the architect being Mr. H. E. Clifford, of Glasgow. The contracts for the work were undertaken by local tradesmen. Funds for the erection of the hall were obtained by a bazaar held in the Town Hall, at which a sum of £1,014 was raised.

PLACES OF WORSHIP, SCHOOLS, &c.—The Castlehill church, so called from its occupying the site of the ancient royal castle, was erected in 1781. The Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is rendered, was built in 1807, and a beautiful stone spire added in 1836. The United Presbyterian church was erected in 1767, and is ornamented with a handsome and substantial stone tower, in the Gothic style, raised in 1834. It was re-erected in 1871, and is now a splendid building in the Italian style of architecture, with a large stone tower 150 feet from the ground. The Episcopal church, situated in Argyle street, opened also in 1834, was at first occupied as a Secession church, and afterwards as a branch of the Scotch Episcopal church. There are two Free churches, one in Lochend, a beautiful stone edifice, and the other in Lorne street. The Roman Catholic chapel, opened in 1849, is a neat structure, with carved stone front and pinnacles, which give it a rather imposing appearance. There are two schools of industry for girls, and the Dalintober boys' and girls' schools, endowed by a Miss Lucy Campbell, in 1843; also Board and Roman Catholic schools.

The most remarkable piece of antiquity is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street. The inscription is in the Saxon character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed—

> Haec est: crux: Domini: YVARI: M: H:
> EACHYRNA. quondam: Rectoris de KYREGAN.
> et: Domini: ANDRE: nati: ejus: Rectoris de
> KIL: COMAN: qui hanc crucem fieri faciebat:
> "This is the cross of Mr. Edward M. H. Eachran, > once Rector of Cryegau, and Master Andrew his son,
> Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross."

There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengoclion, from which there is an extensive view of the surrounding country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, Cowan hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Ryan, the Craig of Ailsa, Black Head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Donnavertie, Sanda Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garron Head, Red Bay and Fair Head, the dangerous bay of Machrihanish, the Mull of Islay and the Paps of Jura; also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the points of Saddell, Carradell, and Skipness. The north and south shores of Campbeltown are both pleasant and healthy. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February, for horses; the second and last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the third Tuesday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; the Friday before Kilmichael market in October, for cattle; and the third Thursday in November, for horses. Population of Campbeltown in 1871, 6,688, and in 1881, 7,693.

SALT-PANS, so called from salt having been made here from salt water, is a small village, six miles w. of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Machrihanish bay, the dashing of whose waves can be heard at a great distance; and the continual heavy swell here, caused by the Atlantic rolling in between Islay and the northern coast of Ireland, is justly dreaded by the mariner. Nearly half a mile south is Losset House, the tasteful and modern mansion of Hector Macneal, Esq. of Ugadale. At Drumlemble, about four miles from Campbeltown, are the works of the Argyll colliery, which are connected with Campbeltown by a narrow gauge railway. Here is also a Board school.

SADDELL and SKIPNESS form an united parish, with an area of 46,872 acres, situated at the inner extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre, the village of Saddell being about 10 miles north of Campbeltown. It contains the ancient castle of Somerled, the great chieftain and founder of the clan Macdonald; and the ruins of a monastery of the Cistercian order, founded by Somerled in 1160. Saddell is now the residence of Colonel John N. M'Leod, whose mansion stands in a good situation in the centre of this fine glen. The ancient castle, which is still entire, and the ruins of the monastery, in which is the cemetery of the ancient Macdonald family, are well worthy of being visited by the curious. Population of the joint parishes in 1871, 1,153, and in 1881, 1,163.

At CARRADALE, a village in the above parish, and 5 miles north of Saddell, a pier has been erected, where the steamer calls on its voyage to and from Glasgow and Campbeltown. A sub-post office and a Board school are in the village.

CLACHAN, TAYINLOAN, KILLEAN, GLENBARR, BALLACHANTUIE, AND KILKENZIE,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA, CARA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

CLACHAN is a village in the parish of Killealmonell, situate in a fine valley on the banks of a small stream, over which is a good stone bridge, and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles S. of the former, and 26 N. of the latter place. In the village is the parish church, a chapel in which Free Church service is held, and a Board school; and a little to the east is the residence of William M'Kinnon, Esq., of Balinakill, who is proprietor of the village, and who has effected considerable improvments. In the vicinity, to the north-west, is a vitrified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous fortification in ruins; and among the hills to the east are several fresh water lochs, well stored with trout. Eight miles south, on the same road, and near the coast is

TAYINLOAN, a small village in the parish of Killean, about 19 miles N. from Campbeltown; and about a mile in a northern direction is Largie Castle, the residence of Mrs. M'Donald, and opposite the village, but separated from the mainland by a sound about four miles broad, is the island of GIGHA, which is nearly six miles long, and from two to three miles broad, and is the property of Col. J. W. Scarlett, of Achamore House. An Established church and a Board school are on the island.

CARA is a neighbouring island, and is about one mile in length.

KILLEAN is about one mile S. of Tayinloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small neat stone building, erected in 1787, and the parochial school; and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a handsome Free church, with a tower, erected in 1846, and situate close by is a Board school. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast. Population in 1881 of the quoad sacra parish, 1,368.

Nearly 3 miles S. of Killean and 12 N. of Campbeltown, is the village of GLENBARR, situate on the banks of the Barr water which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout; and nearly a mile from the shore, in a rich and well cultivated glen, is Barr House, the property of Major Macalister, a fine structure, built in the Gothic style, and from its site an extensive view of the sea and north-east coast of Ireland may be obtained.

Three miles S. of Glenbarr and 9½ N.W. of Campbeltown, on the main road near the shore, is BALLACHANTUIE, a village in the united parish of Killean and Kilkenzie, containing a small church, erected in 1825, and a Board school. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved of late years, and a new road several miles in length was cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

DUNOON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KIRN, INNELLAN, GLENLEAN, SANDBANK, HUNTER'S QUAY, TOWARD, GLENDARUEL, MILLHOUSE, TIGH-NA-BRUAICH, COLINTRAIVE, AND THE PARISHES OF INVERCHAOLAIN, KILFINAN, KILMODAN, AND KILMORICH.

DUNOON and KILMUN is a parish lying on the western shore of the Frith of Clyde. The town of Dunoon, a thriving little one, is the principal place in the district of Cowal, and was created, along with Kirn and Hunter's Quay, a borough in 1868. It is 27 miles S.S.E. of Inveraray, 21 S.S.W. of Strachur, 7 S. of Kilmun, 74 W. of Edinburgh, 30 W. of Glasgow, 10 N. of Rothesay, 8 W. of Greenock, and 4 W. of Gourock. Its prosperity may be mainly ascribed to the pleasant site it occupies, having in front the famed Frith of Clyde, always studded with numerous sailing and steam vessels. The town extends over considerable space along the shore. For a distance of two miles in both directions there are several ranges of genteel-looking and well-furnished houses for the accommodation of families who resort hither in the summer season for sea-bathing. Intermixed with the lodging houses are many tasteful villas, chiefly occupied by the merchants and professional gentlemen of Glasgow, &c., for country retirement. There are also several good hotels.

It is only since the year 1821 that Dunoon has become a place of resort for sea-bathing. At that time there were only three slated houses in the place, and the population did not number above 100. In 1835 a wooden pier was constructed, 300 feet long and 12 broad, with a projection nearly at right angles with the end, 90 feet long and 20 broad. This substantial and convenient work cost £1,500. A new pier was opened in or about 1866, at a cost of £8,000, and a further sum of £1,000 was expended on it in 1881. About a mile distant, at Kirn, is another pier, similarly constructed; and two miles north-east is Hunter's Quay, a good stone building, with a projection and slip, erected in 1828. Here is the Royal Clyde Yacht Club House, in connection with which is an annual regatta on the Clyde. Nearly a mile further, at the entrance of Holy Loch, on its southern shore, is Hafton House, an elegant mansion, occupying a pleasant and picturesque situation, amid thriving plantations and tastefully arranged pleasure grounds. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon is a cone shaped green mound, about 80 feet in height, with the ruins of a castle on its summit. This castle was formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the coast of Argyleshire, and has been the scene of many stirring events and feudal conflicts. Dunoon is not without its share in the history of Queen Mary, who visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle, about 1563.

The parish church was built in 1816, and considerably enlarged in 1835, and contains at present nearly 900 sittings; it is a Gothic edifice, with a square tower, and stands on the most elevated point of Dunoon. It is said that there was once a nunnery on its site. The graves of Bishop Boyd and M'Lean are to be seen in the burial ground of the church, covered with massive freestone slabs, having upon them armorial bearings and inscriptions, which are, however, nearly obliterated. A chapel of ease to Dunoon was erected near Toward Lighthouse, 7 miles S.W., in 1886-7, by subscription; it is a neat Gothic structure, containing 200 sittings, and cost £400. In 1828, a United Presbyterian church was erected in Argyll street, with 300 sittings; but this being found insufficient, a new one was built at a short distance from the old one, in 1874, at a cost of about £8,000. The old church is now used for services in the Gaelic and English tongue. The foundation stone of a new Free church was laid in July, 1876, by Alexander Stephen, Esq., of Fearann Coillie; it is built of stone, in the French Gothic style of architecture, and cost upwards of £13,000. Mr. Robert A. Bryden, Glasgow, was the architect. A Scotch Episcopal church, and an English Episcopal church, also chapels each for Baptists and Roman Catholics—all neat buildings—are the other places of worship in the town and immediate neighbourhood. There are also several public and private boarding and day schools. The police station is a neat stone building in the early Scotch style of architecture. Two churches, one for the Establishment, and the other for the United Presbyterians, are situated at Kirn. A short distance on the road from Dunoon to Sandbank, is the West of Scotland Convalescent Sea-side Homes. This institution, originated and promoted by the late Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sea-air, bathing, &c., to those invalids whose circumstances prevent them from regaining in any other way the health and strength necessary to resume their work. The building is a magnificent stone erection in the Romanesque style of architecture. It was originally intended for a hydropathic establishment on an extensive scale, and cost about £12,000, and is capable of accommodating over 200 inmates. The Burgh Hall, Argyll street, built in 1878, is well worthy of mention. It is a handsome stone building, and contains a fine assembly room, which is sometimes occupied by London and provincial dramatic companies, &c. A sheriff and small debts court is held here every six weeks. Fairs are held at Dunoon on the third Thursday in January and February. There are four weekly newspapers published in the neighbourhood, the Dunoon Herald and Dunoon Telegraph, at Dunoon, and the Argyllshire Standard and Dunoon Observer, at Sandbank. The population of the united parishes of Dunoon and Kilmun was in 1881, 8,002, of which the town of Dunoon contained 4,692.

Innellan is a thriving and respectable village, 4 miles W. of Dunoon, on the shore of the Frith of Clyde. The houses are mostly of a first-class order, and the grounds adjoining being tastefully laid out, give them a neat appearance, many being the summer residences of the Glasgow merchants. There are an Established church, a Free church, an Episcopalian, and a United Presbyterian church, and a good school. The Royal Hotel, which deserves particular notice, is built on an elevated site; its dimensions are large and imposing. In front is the pier, at which steamers to and from Glasgow, Greenock and Wemyss Bay call several times a day. A few miles further on is Castle Toward, a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay, Esq., and now the residence of Colin C. Finlay, Esq. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont of Ardlamont. Population in 1881, 859.

Glenlean (or Clachaig) is a village in the parish of Dunoon, from 6 to 7 miles N.W. therefrom.

Sandbank (or Ardnadam) is a small but thriving village three miles N.W. of Dunoon, on the road to Kilmun. There are two churches in the village, one for the Establishment and the other a Free church. There is also a good school, several respectable shopkeepers and traders, and three hotels. Population of Sandbank in 1881, 570.

INVERCHAOLAIN (or INVERHALLAN) is a parish in Cowal district, between four and five miles S.W. of Dunoon, and is intersected by an arm of the sea called Loch Striven, running about eight miles into the county, the two sides of which present a sea coast of about three miles. The district is mountainous and pastoral. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school in the parish, the population of which in 1881 was 407.

KILFINAN is a parish and village in Cowal district, the latter about 10 miles N.W. from Tigh-na-Bruaich. The parish church is in the village, as well as a Free church and a Board school. MILLHOUSE and ARDLAMONT are districts in the southern portion of the parish. There is an Established church at KILBRIDE, a Free church at Millhouse, and Board schools at Ardlamont and Millhouse. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,153.

KILMODAN is also a parish in Cowal district. The Clachan of Glendaruel in this parish is about 17 miles N.W. of Dunoon. There are an Established and a Free church, as well as two Board schools in the parish, which in 1881 had a population of 323.

TIGH-NA-BRUAICH is a village in the parish of Kilfinan, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the Kyles of Bute. An Established and a Free church and a Board school are in the village; there are likewise two good hotels. Population in 1881, 771.

COLINTRAIVE is a small village in the parish of Inverchaolain, also situated in the Kyles of Bute. It contains a Free church and Board school, also a good hotel.

EASDALE AND LUING,

SHUNA, TORSAY, BELNAHUA & FLADDA ISLANDS, WITH MELFORT, KILNINVER, KILMELFORT, & NEIGHBOUROODS.

EASDALE is a village partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; and in the united parish of KILBRANDON and KILCHATTAN. It is 16 miles S.W. by S. of Oban, 30 N.N.W. of Lochgilphead, 40 W. of Inveraray, and 142 W. of Edinburgh. It is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, which are said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the Marquis of Breadalbane, and are wrought by the Easdale Slate Company, who altogether employ about 250 men, and produce about 15,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland and the North of England. Several of the quarries, which are now above two hundred and fifty feet below the sea, are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welsh rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed of this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. A new pier was erected in 1873, at which the steamers call regularly. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, about two miles east of Easdale, is situated on a fine pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle about a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the island of Luing; and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting. At TOBERONACHY, slate quarries were opened about five years ago, by the lessees, Messrs. J. & A. M'Lean. There is good quay accommodation, and vessels can be loaded at almost any state of the tide. In 1881 the village had a population of 460.

BELNAHUA, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present wrought by Messrs. J. & H. Shaw & Co. The number of men generally employed is about sixty. Population in 1881, 108.

SHUNA is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles S.S.W. of Oban. FLADDA, LUING, and TORSAY are also small islands in the above parish.

MELFORT is a village, pleasantly situated at the head of Loch Melfort, a mile off the main road, and in the united parish of Kilninver and Kilmelfort. It is about eight miles S.E. of Easdale, and 15½ S.S.W. of Oban. The manufacture of gunpowder was carried on in the village, eight mills being employed for that purpose; but on the property changing hands the powder works were closed. There is a convenient quay for the use of shipping, and in the village is a public school under the charge of the Kilninver and Kilmelfort School Board.

KILNINVER and KILMELFORT form a united parish in Lorn district, lying on the west coast to the south of Kilmore. The Kilmelfort part of the parish lies south of Kilninver. There are public schools at both the above places, and a church of the Establishment at Kilninver. Population in 1881, 405.

INVERARAY,

WITH FURNACE, CAIRNDOW, CLADICH, DALMALLY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INERVARAY is a royal burgh, and the county town of Argyleshire, 102 miles W. by N. of Edinburgh, 60 N.W. of Glasgow, 32 S.E. of Oban, by Port Sonachan Ferry, and 42 by Dalmally, avoiding the Ferry, 20 S.E. of Bonaw by the before-mentioned ferry, but 32 by the coach road and Dalmally, 24 N.E. of Lochgilphead, and 76 N.N.E. of Campbeltown. It is delightfully situated on the north-western shore of Loch Fyne, on apoint of land (Ardreanich, or the Fern Point), forming a southern point of a fine bay, which receives the waters of the Aray and the Shira. Over the first is an elegant stone bridge of two arches, within half a mile of the town: the second is about a mile and a half east, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. From the former of these streams the town derives its name, "Inver" signifying the mouth, from its proximity to the mouth of the Aray. A short distance from the town, at the extremity of the bay, stands Inveraray Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Argyll. The architecture of this mansion is highly finished Gothic, with turrets at the angles, and its site is particularly beautiful and commanding. From its southern front there is an expansive view for several miles down Loch Fyne, and of the adjacent lofty mountains, which are adorned with fine plantations to their summits. A square pavilion, rising high above its turrets, supplies light to a gallery (which leads to all the upper chambers), and a spacious hall, furnished with an elegant organ, and decorated with the arms used by the Argyllshire militia in 1741, also the colours of the 93rd Highlanders. Amongst the paintings are those of the earl who was executed in the reign of Charles II., and also the marquis who suffered in that of James VI. of Scotland. The drawing room and some other apartments are lined with rich and costly tapestry of rare designs; indeed the whole interior is fitted and furnished in sumptuous style. The castle also contains two beautiful pedestals of red granite, or porphyry, of a very rare kind, discovered by the present duke near the Ross of Mull; two slabs were sent to Aberdeen and converted into pedestals, in forming which it was found to be much superior and to take a higher polish than either the Peterhead or the Aberdeen granite. The Duke of Sutherland subsequently procured a considerable quantity for the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. On entering the bay, the castle has a very majestic appearance, and the woods, that rising for a considerable distance adorn the domain, give the town an appearance of grandeur. Every stranger is struck with the neatness of the town, which, though small, is well built. The park and grounds of the castle present a drive, almost in a direct line, of about two miles, with several others of great extent, all thrown open to the public. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Invincible" armada, blown up in Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay, and is about ten feet in length, is named the "Gunna-Cam," or "glen gun," and is fired on certain occasions.

Loch Fyne terminates about nine miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery and the fame of its herrings, is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty or thirty years, frequently amounted to £30,000, but of late years it has hardly yielded any, and the scarcity is supposed to have been the results of trawling. In prosperous seasons there were at times from three hundred to four hundred boats employed at once on its waters. The loch is fifty miles long, and is about ten broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding three above Otter Ferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well built quay. In the town are two branch banks—one of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the other of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and two good hotels and posting houses. A handsome stone building, used as a coffee and reading room, has been erected at the neck of the quay, at the cost of upwards of £1,000, in memory of the late Elizabeth Sutherland, Duchess of Argyll. There is daily communication with Glasgow throughout the year, by means of steamers across Loch Fyne to St. Catherine's, also by MacBrayne's steam boats, which sail three times a week, and by the "Lord of the Isles," which sails daily from June to September.

Inverary was erected into a burgh by charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk and a treasurer. The burgh unites with Campbeltown and Oban in this county, and with Ayr and Irvine in Ayrshire, in sending one member to Parliament, the present representative being John Sinclair, Esq., Grangemouth, Stirlingshire. The court house and gaol, forming a substantial building of stone, is situate on the shore, and has an imposing appearance when seen from the loch. In it a sheriff's court is held every Friday from 15th January to 15th March, from 3rd or 4th April to 31st July, and from 1st October to 15th December, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in March, May, August, and last Tuesday in October; also a borough court occasionally.

On the esplanade may be seen a sculptured stone cross, supposed to be of the date 1400; it is eight feet high, and bears the following inscription: "Haec est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Dondeani, Meic Gyllichonghan, Patrici filii ejus, et Machmore, filii Patrici, qui hanc crucem fieri fecerunt." (This is the cross of the nobles, viz., Duncan M'Comyn, Patrick, his son, and Ludovick the son of Patrick, who caused this cross to be erected.) The cross was brought from Iona. In a garden near the church is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1685, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the errors of the Romish church. A splendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Dunquinich," which was in olden times a beacon or watch-tower, mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose." The places of worship are the Established church, a neat stone building, surmounted by a spire, situated in the main street, and in which service is performed both in Gaelic and English; a United Presbyterian church, erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson, Esq.; a neat Free church, built in 1844, at the south end of the town; and an Episcopalian church, a small stone structure, erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,600, the site being given by the Duke of Argyll. There are also two Board schools here. About a mile and a half north-east of Inveraray is Glen-Shira, in length about six miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood and rich meadow land, intersected with winding stream and lake (Duloch), the whole furnishing a landscape of no ordinary beauty. Fairs for cattle are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May, and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July; at Glenorchy, on the third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November. Population of the borough in 1881, 864.

CAIRNDOW is a small village in the parish of Kilmorich, situate near the head of Loch Fyne, about 11 miles N.E. from Inveraray. There are an Established church, a Board school, and an hotel, where tourists will find every comfort, anglers being allowed free fishing in the river Kinglas. Here is also the estate of Ardkinglas, the property of G. F. W. Callender, Esq.; the house is at present tenanted by Herbert Strutt, Esq., as a shooting residence.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, 10 miles N. of Inveraray, and in the united parish of Glenorchy and Inishail; a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan Ferry, three miles distant, crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened 10 miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban. Here is a Board school, an Established church, and a post office, and near to Port Sonachan is a Free church.

DALMALLY, 16 miles N.E. of Inveraray, is beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in view of the vale of Glenorchy. The parish church is situated on the road to Oban; a Free church is also close by, and there is also a Board school. Loch Awe is 26 miles long and from one to half a mile broad; its most attractive scenery lies between here and Port Sonachan, the hills on each side being thickly clothed with timber, several small islands being interspersed on its surface. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn castle, supposed to have been built about 1440, by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. Since the opening of the new line to Oban, in connection with the Callander and Oban railway, a first-class station has been erected here, and the Dalmally Hotel is situate within five minutes walk from the station.

At FURNACE, about eight miles S. from Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne, are extensive granite quarries, leased and wrought by Messrs. William Sim & Co.

ISLAND OF ISLAY,

INCLUDING BOWMORE, BRIDGEND, BRUICHLADDICH, PORT-ASKAIG, PORT-CHARLOTTE, PORT-ELLEN, ARDBEG, PORTNAHAVEN, BALLYGRANT, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

ISLAY is a large island, and the most southerly of those called the Hebrides. In length from north to south it is about thirty miles, its extreme breadth about eighteen, and its contents about 154,00 acres. Port-Askaig, the most northern port on the island, is distant form Edinburgh (by way of Tarbert) 179 miles, from Inveraray 76, and from Tarbert 40. It lies in a westerly direction from the peninsular of Cantire, distant from it about 20 miles, and is separated on the north from the Island of Jura by a narrow channel. It comprises three parochial divisions, namely, Bowmore (or Kilarrow), Kilchoman and Kildalton. The mountains to the east of the island rise to an altitude of 1,500 feet, and are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; and great numbers of seals are to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat beaches and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and the island contains several beautiful lakes, well-stocked with most delicious trout; there are also two rivers, the Sorn and the Laggan; the former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter into Laggan Bay. The Laggan water is not surpassed in the West Highlands as a salmon stream. In boisterous weather many vessels come into Loch Indaal for shelter. Near the centre of the island is Loch Finlaggan, about three miles in circumference, with an islet of the same name in the middle. It was here the Macdonalds (Lords of the Isles), resided in all the pomp of royalty, and the ruins of their castle can yet be seen. Near the Island of Finlaggan is another little isle, called Eilan-nacorille—the island of council—where a body of judges constantly sat to decide differences between the subjects of the Macdonalds. On the first island were buried the wives and the children of the Lords of the Isles, but their own persons were deposited in the more sacred ground of Iona. Before Islay became the seat of government for the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, but it is still susceptible of great improvement. Upwards of three thousand head of black cattle, and several hundred horses of the Clydesdale breed, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in this island, and a company was formed, called the Islay Mining Company, for extracting some of those minerals, which has, however, suspended operations for the present, on account of the fall in the price of lead. There is regular daily communication by steamer, from Port-Ellen, and on Tuesday and Friday from Port-Askaig, with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the main land. There are many ruinous remains of ancient castles, churches, &c., scattered over the island; but, perhaps, the most remarkable natural curiosity in this part of the empire is Sloc-Mhaol-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about nine miles from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush, by two channels in the rock, covered with natural arches; the grandeur of the scene presented during the flowing of the tide is inconceivable. This cave is scarcely inferior to the famed one of Fingal, in Staffa, and can only be entered by a boat in fine weather. At the entrance stands a perpendicular rock, fifty feet high, with a belt round it, and is designated the "soldier," from appearing to guard the approach to it. The interior is doom-roofed and spacious, with a beautiful lake of fresh water, "icy cold and chrystal clear." There are several other interesting perforations in different parts of the island. The scenery in this locality, as well as several other points, is highly interesting, and occasionally approaches the sublime. It was on this coast that on the 27th of April, 1847, the Exmouth was wrecked, when two hundred and forty-eight of the crew and passengers perished. Population of Islay in 1871, 8,143, and in 1881, 7,526.

BOWMORE is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1768, and is situated on the east side of Loch Indaal, three miles south of Islay House, 11 S.S.W. from Port-Askaig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The village, which consists of two principal streets and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay and a comfortable inn. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The public structures are the parish church, a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire; a neat Free church, a Baptist chapel, a union workhouse, and a building originally intended for a gaol, but now appropriated to the more beneficial uses of a public library, containing about 1,800 volumes. An assembly room is on the same floor as the library. There is also a large and excellent public school, with a house for the master. A sheriff's court is held here twice a year. There is a distillery worked by Messrs. W. & J. Mutter. The Bowmore and the Seaview Hotels are the principal in the village. Population in 1881, 834.

BRUICHLADDICH is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, eight miles from Bowmore, on the road to Port-Charlotte. Here are a large distillery, a temperance hotel, and post office; there is also a quay at which vessels of considerable burden can unload in fine weather.

At BRIDGEND, three miles N. of Bowmore, and eight miles S. of Port-Askaig, is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, which greatly facilitates the commercial transactions of the island. A court is held monthly for the recovery of small debts, and sessions for the trial of petty offences. A short distance to the west stands Islay House, surrounded with fine gardens and well planted grounds; it is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour, on the north-east side of the island, opposite Feoline, in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad. The port is 11 miles N.E. of Bowmore, and has a quay where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in great abundance.

About four miles from Bridgend, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of BALLYGRANT, where there is a lead mine, which when working gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles S.W. of Port-Askaig, and contains a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school, erected by Charles Morrison, Esq. Population in 1881, 502.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village, in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the Island; it is 11 miles S.E. of Bowmore, and 22 S. of Port-Askaig. In 1824 there stood only one house here, but in 1836 there were above one hundred and fifty; the population and habitations have greatly increased since then. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay, a commodious one, formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour, was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832, by Campbell of Islay, who also erected a lighthouse, and was again further enlarged and improved in 1881, by John Ramsay, Esq., J.P., of Kildalton. Mr. Ramsay became proprietor of the parish of Kildalton (which includes the quoad sacra parish of Oa), in 1863, and during his proprietorship he has expended more than half the rental of the parish in agricultural improvements, including stone walls and farm steadings of uncommon stability. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established here. The village is substantially built, and contains two inns. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing, and the prosperity of the village may be said to have been increasing for several years. Population in 1881, 989; of Kildalton and Oa, 2,252.

About four miles E. from Port Ellen are the villiages of LAGAVULIN and ARDBEG. At the latter place is one of the largest distilleries in the island; and there is a commodious harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 12 feet draught of water can lie and discharge at ebb tide.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport, 24 miles S.W. of Port-Askaig, and 16 S.W. of Bridgend. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and near the port is a lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here are also a parliamentary church, a Free church, and a public school. A considerable business is done in the season of fishing, the shores on this part of the island abounding with the finny treasures. Population in 1881, 361.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follows:—For cattle, Bridgend, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; November for horses; Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after; for cattle, Tuesday before. At Bridgend, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Bridgend, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Ellen, for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore.

THE ISLE OF JURA,

WITH THOSE OF COLONSAY, GARVELLOCH, LUNGA, ORANSAY AND SCARBA, WITH MILLTOWN (OR CRAIGHOUSE) VILLAGE.

JURA, an island of the Hebrides, is 33 miles long, and from two to 10 broad, separated from Knapdale, on the western coast of Scotland, by the sound of Jura (10 miles broad), and from the island of Islay, to the south, by the sound of Islay (about a mile broad), and with the other islands, form the united parish of Jura and Colonsay. Jura belongs to James Campbell, Esq., whose residence is at Ardfin, a respectable mansion on the south shore of the island. It is the most rugged of the Western Isles, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. The inhabitants all live on the east side of the island. The most remarkable objects on the isle are the Paps of Jura, an eminence nearly 2,500 feet above the level of the sea; they are three in number, standing on the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them, the tops being round, and consisting for some distance down the sides of loose stones, rendering the ascent difficult; the southern one is called "Benachaolais" (the Mountain of Sound), the next and highest, "Benanoir" (the Mountain of Gold), and the third "Benshianta" (the Consecrated Mountain). There are five of the these conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as the Paps. Corrabhain (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but lowest of the cluster. The island also contains several caves, one of them being so large that it is said a regiment of soldiers might perform their exercise in this spacious arena. To the north of the island, in a strait, nearly a mile broad, separating the island of Scarba from Jura, is the gulf of Correy Vrecken, where the rush of water is so great during the ebbing of the tide, as to form a terrible whirlpool, the noise of which can be heard for many miles. The red deer abounds in the uplands of this island. Fairs are held on the second last Friday in May, Friday after last Tuesday in June, Friday after last Thursday in July, and the second last Friday in October, all for cattle. Population in 1881, 781.

COLONSAY, a rather high rocky island, to the west of Jura, 12 miles long, and about 3 broad, is the property of Duncan M'Neill, Esq., of Colonsay, who has a good mansion house on the island of Killorran. The ruinous sacred building, and the numerous inscriptions on the grave-stones covering the ashes of the illustrious dead, are considered by many almost equal to those found on the island of Iona. Population in 1881, 387.

GARVELLOCH, or HOLY ISLAND, contains an extensive old fort, called Duncounel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles, and in one of them, called the Nun's Island, are considerable remains of an old nunnery, said to have been founded by St. Columbus.

ORANSAY, a small island to the south of Colonsay, contains the residence of the late Captain Alexander M'Neill, who was one of many that perished in the melancholy shipwreck of the Orion steamer, off Portpatrick, in 1850. The house is now tenanted by his son, Mr. Malcolm M'Neill, brother of the brave and distinguished soldier Sir John M'Neill, of Colonsay.

MILLTOWN, frequently called CRAIGHOUSE, the principal village in Jura, is eight miles from Port-Askaig Ferry. It has a good quay, and the harbour, which is large and formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour. A few years ago was erected an excellent wooden wharf, extending about 400 feet in length, which has proved a great boon to the island, as steamers may now come alongside at any state of the tide. About half a mile north of the village is the parish church and a Board school. The village contains a distillery and a comfortable inn.

KILMUN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF STRONE, BLAIRMORE, ARDENTINNY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILMUN, formerly the capital of a parish of the same name, now incorporated with that of Dunoon, is a pleasant, thriving village, and of late years has acquired no little notice as a place resorted to for sea bathing. It is situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 22 miles S.E. of Inveraray, 16 S.E. of Strachur, seven S. of Dunoon, 30 W. of Glasgow, and eight W. of Greenock. This place may be almost said to owe its origin to the late proprietor, David Napier, Esq., for previously to attracting his notice there were very few houses, whereas it is now a respectable village, having many handsome dwellings, occupied as summer residences by opulent merchants and professional gentlemen of Glasgow. Holy Loch is fully three miles long; at its entrance it is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, extending a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig, the latter river flowing from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, seven miles long and one broad, whose steep, rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers before mentioned afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the ride through the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is seldom exceeded for wild and sublime scenery. The quay, which was constructed by Mr. Napier, before mentioned, in 1829, will admit the steamboats alongside at all times of the tide. The quarantine station for the Clyde was formerly opposite this village.

Of the ancient history of Kilmun little is known; but its old church, the mausoleum of the ducal family of Argyll, and especially the tower of the original church, evidence it to have been in former times a place of some note. Close by the church of Kilmun stands a square and dilapidated tower, which, as if to avert further decay, nature has covered with a mantle of ivy, which hangs in graceful festoons from its mouldering walls. In the church is the sepulchre of the Argyll family, which contains the mortal remains of six dukes and two duchesses. Near the sepulchre are statues of a lady and of an armed warrior, supposed to be Donnache-au-aidh, or Fortunate Duncan; and suspended above are sundry warlike habiliments in a state of decay. About a quarter of a mile westward of the village is the Kilmun Seaside Home for Convalescent Poor, a handsome stone building, pleasantly situated, commanding a fine view of Holy Loch and the opposite shore. Population of Kilmun in 1881, 331.

STRONE, a small village, which nearly joins Kilmun, has greatly improved within the last few years, many respectable houses and shops having been built, besides the erection of two churches. There is also a quay, which will admit steamers alongside at all hours of the tide.

PORTINSTUCK (or BLAIRMORE), on the west shore of Loch Long, adjoining Strone, is a small but improving village of recent erection. There is a neat wooden pier here.

ARDENTINNY, another small village about five miles higher up the loch, is situated in a beautiful vale, and celebrated for the picturesque scenery its neighbourhood affords. There is a neat stone church of the Establishment and a Board school here.

LOCHGILPHEAD,

ARDRISHAIG, BELLANOCH, KILMARTIN, KILMICHAEL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a thriving burgh, pleasantly situated at the northern extremity or head of Loch Gilp, from which the name is derived. It is 125 miles W. of Edinburgh, 51 N. of Campbeltown, 21½ S.W. of Inveraray, 18½ N. of Tarbert, and eight S. of Kilmartin. The town is of comparatively modern erection, and its site contained only two or three fishermen's huts at the commencement of the present century; it now consists of several well-formed streets, the footpaths of which are well paved, and the inhabitants are plenteously supplied with water from a reservoir constructed by the burgh commissioners. The streets are lighted by gas supplied by a joint stock company, whose pipes extend from the Asylum, at Lochgilphead to beyond Ardrishaigh—a distance of four miles. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 25 and 26 Victoria, cap. 101, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the provisions of the said Act. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing, others being engaged in woollen cloth manufactories and dye works, which have been established here some time. Meetings of the Argyll Police and Lunacy Boards are held at stated periods, also monthly meetings of the South Argyll district road trustees, and of the local justices, and a sheriff's small debt court is held every alternate month. Lochgilphead is rapidly improving; in front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a piece of ground made for the convenience of the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbeltown, Inveraray, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Islay, &c., and Glasgow. On the Kilmory side is a quay for the accommodation of the small craft engaged in the herring fishery and coal vessels.

The parliamentary church, erected at the head of Argyll street, in 1827-8, was rebuilt in 1855, at a cost of £2,500. The building is of native stone, with freestone facings, in the early Gothic style, Mr. John Honeyman, of Glasgow, being the architect. There is a Baptist chapel in the same street, a Reformed Presbyterian church, now Martyrs' Free church, in Union street, a Free church in Lochnell street, and there was erected in 1852, on the north side of the town, a handsome Scotch Episcopal cathedral church. The latter is a neat building in the decorated Gothic style of architecture, and consists of a nave and chancel, the windows of which latter are of stained glass with a figure of our Saviour and the arms of Argyll and the Isles. There is also a residence for the Bishop of Argyll and the Isles; this is at present occupied by Dr. Carmichael, the Bishop preferring to reside at Ballachulish. There are Board schools here. The site commands an extensive view of Loch Fyne to Arran, and the varied and beautiful scenery around. A commodious court-house and gaol have been built. The Argyll and Bute District Asylum, which has been considerably enlarged, and is now capable of containing 408 persons, is situated on the hill overlooking the town, and a combination poor-house has also been erected there. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchendarroch, the residence of Alexander Campbell, Esq., on whose property the greater part of the town is built. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory House, the seat of Sir John Powlett Campbell Orde, Bart.; the house, surrounded with its well-wooded grounds, forms a conspicuous and interesting feature in the landscape from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Ten miles north-west is Duntroon Castle, the property of John Malcolm, Esq., of Poltalloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county, and on whose estate above two thousand acres of soft peat moss, at the head of Loch Crinan, have been converted into excellent corn and grazing land; the farm is appropriately called "Experiment." Calton Mor, the elegant residence of this gentleman, erected at a cost of about £20,000, overlooks the fertile plain which has been thus reclaimed. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses, on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in May, and the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. Population in 1881, 1,489.

ARDRISHAIG is two miles S., its inhabitants being chiefly engaged in fishing and curing herrings, and in the transit trade which connects the Western Highlands with Glasgow and the other ports on the Clyde. This place may be said to be the port of Lochgilphead, with which it is now nearly joined. In addition to a protective pier of 400 yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, a commodious low water pier and slip within the harbour, with a depth of seven feet, were erected in 1837 by the Government commissioners of the Crinan canal. This canal extends from Ardrishaig to Crinan, a distance of ten miles, and affords the means of obviating a boisterous passage of forty leagues round the Mull of Cantire. Steam packets pass through the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. Here is an Established church, also a Free church, and an Episcopal and a Board school. The Ardrishaig Hotel is the principal one in the neighbourhood. Many excellent sites are along the coast; several have already been built on, and some villas are let furnished as summer quarters, the increased communication with the south making it a favourite coast residence. Population in 1881, 1,224.

BELLANOCH is a small village in the parish of North Knapdale, about five miles W. of Lochgilphead, situated in a glen on the southern bank of the Crinan canal, which here forms a fine triangular sheet of water, and terminates at Crinan, about a mile further west. The village contains a sub-post office and a Board school.

KILMARTIN, a parish and small village eight miles N. of Lochgilphead, contains a comfortable inn, a Board school, a parish church and a Free church. About two miles to the east is the mansion of Calton Mor, the residence of John Malcolm, Esq. of Poltalloch; about a quarter of a mile more distant, standing on a prominent rock facing Loch Crinan, is Duntroon Castle, and within four miles of the last named are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle, formerly the residence of the bishops of Argyll. Eleven miles west of Kilmartin, by a circuitous road, is Craignish Castle, the residence of Charles F. T. Gascoyne, of Craignish. At BARBRECK is the handsome mansion and demesne of Admiral Colin Yorke Campbell. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the first Thursday in March, for horses, and the fourth Thursday in November, for horses and hiring servants. A prize show, in connection with the Poltalloch Farming Society, is held here for cattle, sheep, and horses, in September. The parish has an area of 25,102 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 811.

KILMICHAEL-GLASSARY, at one time a burgh of considerable repute, now a small hamlet, is a parish situated about midway between Lochgilphead and Kilmartin. The parish church and manse of Glassary are here. A Board school, a market stance, and a good inn are at BRIDGEND, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous druidical remains. Two large and much frequented fairs are held here annually, at which from seven to eight thousand head of black cattle are generally exposed for sale—namely, on the last Wednesday in May, which is also for horses and sheep, and the last Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October—at both of which fairs the hiring of servants takes place. Population of the parish in 1881, 4,348.

LOCHGOILHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CARRICK, ST. CATHERINE'S, STRACHUR, AND STRATHLACHLAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGOILHEAD, with KILMORICH, is an united parish in Cowal district, situated at the head of Loch Goil, between Lochs Fyne and Long. An Established and a Free church and a Board school are in the village. The place is mountainous and chiefly pastoral, and has beautiful surroundings of wood, water and glen. Daily communication is maintained with Greenock and Glasgow by steamer, and by coach with St. Catherine's for Inveraray. CAIRNDOW is a hamlet in this parish. Population in 1881, 870.

STRACHUR is a village on the eastern bank of Loch Fyne, in the united parish of Strachur and Strathlachlan, and is situated 19 miles N.W. from Dunoon. There are two churches of the Establishment, one at Strachur and the other at Strachlachlan, also a Free church at the former place, and three Board schools in the parish.

ST. CATHERINE'S is a small village in the united parish of Strachurn and Strathlachlan, and is situated about three and a half miles N.E. from Strachur and nine N.W. from Lochgoilhead. There is a Board school here, and also a good Hotel.

OBAN,

ACHNACLOICH, CONNEL FERRY, LOCH AWE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

OBAN is a modern neat town and seaport, in the parish of Kilmore and Kilbride, 136 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 117 N.W. from Glasgow, 40 S.S.W. from Fort William, 32 W.N.W. from Inveraray, over Port Sonachan ferry (42 by coach road, via Dalmally), and 30 S.E. from Tobermory. To visit Staffa and Iona hence, going round the Island of Mull, the voyage is about 120 miles, and it is about the same distance to Portree, in Skye. The town has a beautiful situation on west coast of Mid Lorn district, and at the head of a fine bay, formed by the Island of Kerrara in front, having an entrance at each end. The bay is from 12 to 20 fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a good number of merchantmen. There are three quays, that on the north having been enlarged and improved in 1863, and that on the south in 1876. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whisky and wool. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, four councillors, and a town clerk, and Oban is contributory with the burghs of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Irvine in returning one member to Parliament the present representative being John Sinclair, Esq. The new Sheriff Court House and Police Station, the building of which was commenced at the end of 1886, has just been completed, from the designs of Mr. D. Macintosh, of Oban. The Court House, the main entrance to which is in Albany street, contains the offices of the procurator-fiscal the sheriff clerk depute, &c. The style of architecture is the severe classic, the external appearance being commanding and boldly detailed. The front wing is entirely finished with polished freestone, and the back wing of grey granite with freestone dressings. Further along Albany street are the Police Buildings, consisting of the police station and the usual offices, the material employed being granite and freestone to match the back portion of the court house. A sheriff's court is held once a quarter, a justice of peace court for small debts the first Friday of every month, and a police and burgh court on the first Monday of every month. A quarry of excellent freestone was some years since opened, about four miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan, and in the vicinity of Loch Awe are the well-known Ben Cruachan granite quarries.

The town is divided by a small river, the west side belonging to Robert Macfie, Esq. of Airds, that on the north to A. W. M'Dougall, Esq. of Battlefield, and Colonel M'Dougall, of Dunollie. In the eastern division is the parish church, erected in 1821. St. John's Scotch Episcopal church, a neat Gothic edifice, with beautiful stained glass windows, capable of seating 200, was erected by subscription, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors, at a cost of about £1,700; it was consecrated in September, 1864, by the Bishop of London. The Bishop of the diocese and trustees are the patrons. In Tweedale street is a Congregational chapel, built in 1820, capable of accommodating 500. A handsome Free church occupies a commanding site in the rear of the town. St. Columba church (Established), George street, is an elegant structure, with a spire 120 feet high, erected in 1875. The United Presbyterian church, in the neighbourhood of St. John's, was erected in 1866. To meet the requirements of the rapidly rising district of CONNEL FERRY, the foundation stone of a new church of the Establishment was laid on the 17th June, 1887, and has recently been completed. The church, which is built entirely of Ben Cruachan granite, occupies a position on a rising piece of ground to the north of the village, and forms a prominent object in the magnificent scenery of the district. The architect was Mr. David Macintosh, of Oban. To the south of the town, a union poorhouse was opened in 1862, for the reception of the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; it embraces all necessary accommodation, and, with the ground, covers an area of three acres. There are three newspapers published weekly—the Oban Times, the Oban Telegraph, and the Oban Express. The latter is the only halfpenny paper wholly printed and published in the Scottish Highlands, and first appeared March 30th, 1885. The Express, which is a well printed full-sized news sheet, is issued on Friday morning of each week, and advocates advanced Liberal principles. Though it is sold at the popular halfpenny, the Express has all the features of a first-class county paper; it has also a Gaelic column and a visitors' list appears during the season, and special editions are issued from time to time. The title of the paper is embellished by a view of Oban and its pretty bay. The editor is Mr. Higgins, an old pressman, and the publishing offices are in Craig-ard road.

Oban and its vicinity offer many inducements both to the tourist and antiquarian. Among the antiquities may be particularly noticed the ruins of Dunollie Castle, situated a mile north of the town, and three miles distant is Dunstaffnage Castle. The latter formerly belonged to the powerful Lord of Lorn, and was demolished by Robert Bruce, in retaliation for the injuries inflicted upon him and his followers, after crossing Loch Lomond on his way to Ireland, by that noble. In the chapel of the castle is a remarkable echo. Three miles to the south, on the Ardrishaig road, there is the "Serpent Mound," at the end of Loch Nell, which has attracted much attention from antiquarians. Six miles to the north, on the opposite side to Loch Etive, are the ruins of Berigonium, the ancient metropolis of Caledonia; and two miles further north is Balcaldine Castle. From a hill on the Island of Kerrara may be seen the distant objects of Duart Castle in Mull, Lady Rock, Ardtornish Castle, in Morven; the Castle of Aros, the Castle of Gylen, Ben Cruachan, Ben Nevis, the Glencoe mountains, Easdale, Luing, &c. The tourist will be well rewarded for his trouble in visiting this place, as it is acknowledged to be the finest view in Scotland. In visiting the castles, &c., the antiquarian will find much gratification, all of them having been the residences of the ancient Scotch nobles, their present appearance even exhibiting proofs of their former state and grandeur. Oban may also be said to rank among the most pleasant summer retreats in the Highlands of Scotland. Its situation for bathing is extremely good, and it possesses every accommodation for the convenience of the great number of fashionable and wealthy visitors who are constantly calling here in the summer, on their way to the fine scenery on the western coast, and in Skye, and to the far-famed islands of Staffa and Iona, and who by their presence impart a liveliness and interest to the appearance of the town. The inhabitants of Oban endeavour to imitate the manners and conversation of the visitors, which causes much better English to be spoken, and far more politeness and urbanity of manners to be displayed here than in many other places on this coast. Much improvement has been effected of late years, and many handsome villa residences may be now seen on the hill behind the town; modern shops and warehouses are also superseding the old ones. An Act of Parliament was obtained in 1865 by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, for the construction of a line from Callander to this town, so as to connect it by a direct line of communication with the Lowlands; it was completed and opened through to Oban on 1st of July, 1880. The contractors for the making of the line were Messrs. Mitchell and Ireland, of Montrose, and for the station and pier, Messrs. Duncan Hobson and Sons, Glasgow, the latter of which cost between £50,000 and £60,000. The line from Callander to Oban, a distance of 70 miles, is owned by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, but is worked by the Caledonian Railway Company for them. Steamboats ply between Glasgow, Greenock, Inverness, Mull, Staffa, and Iona daily in summer, to Skye and Stornoway twice a week, and to other places further north once a fortnight during the season, also to Ireland. The coach service is also constant and regular. Fairs and markets: for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hiring, April and October. At Connel on Monday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before the last Wednesday in October. Population of Oban in 1871, 2,426, and in 1881, 4,046.

ACHNACLOICH, about nine miles from Oban, is a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway.

LOCH AWE, a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian line, is about 22 miles from Oban, between Lochs Fyne and Etive. This loch, which is about 24 miles long, and one of the most beautiful as well as one of the finest fishing lochs in Scotland, is surrounded on the north by huge mountains, of which the highest is Ben Cruachan. Its banks are well wooded, and numerous islands are dotted here and there, on one of which (Inishail) formerly existed a convent of Cistercian nuns. The loch abounds with trout, and the most convenient hotels for the angler are the Loch Awe, Dalmally and Port Sonachan hotels, at any of which he will find excellent accommodation.

SOUTHEND

IS a parish of 30,801 acres, situated at the southern extremity of the peninsular of Kintyre, the village, which is sometimes called Newton Argyll, being ten miles S. of Campbeltown. Agriculture and fishing are the predominating occupations of the inhabitants, who in the summer reap some advantage from the visits of many strangers to this romantic and interesting part of the country. About half a mile south of the village stands the rock Dounavertie, a spot interesting to the historian and the antiquarian as having been the scene of many sanguinary conflicts, with the details of which the intelligent villagers are conversant—especially the ruthless massacre of three hundred of the M'Donalds here by General Leslie after their capitulation in 1649. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stand the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the Highlanders were interred, and on the south side the Lowlanders; but that distinction no longer exists. The Marquis of Lorne resides temporarily at Macharioch.

On the island of SANDA, about three miles distant, is a lighthouse said to be the best and most efficient one on the coast. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village, the United Presbyterian church. The Board school here is a substantial building, and a well conducted institution. Telegraphic communication is complete between the Mull and the principal places in the county and Glasgow. Population of the parish of Southend in 1881, 955.

POST OFFICE, SOUTHEND, Charles Black, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts of Scotland, England, &c. (by mail car from Campbeltown) at 7 30 p.m., and are despatched thereto at 1 30 p.m. in winter; and arrive at 4 30 p.m. and are despatched at 11 a.m. in summer, Sunday excepted.——Telegraph Office. CAMPBELTOWN is the nearest Money Order Office.

TARBERT (EAST AND WEST),

WITH THEIR VICINITIES.

TARBERT, or as it is sometimes designated, EAST TARBERT, is a fishing port and village, situated at the head of a fine sheltered harbour on Loch Fyne. It is 139 miles W. of Edinburgh, 87 N. by E. of Campeltown, 89 S.S.W. of Inveraray, and 15 S. of Lochgilphead. The town, or village, may be said to form a semicircle round the harbour—the latter small, and the entrance to it narrow, having several sunken rocks, and consequently difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered, no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are mostly cured for the Glasgow markets. In a commandingsituation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, formerly a place of great strength, and immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there are also a Free church and a Board school. Steamers call here daily on their way to and from Glasgow and Ardrishaig; communication is also constant with Inveraray, and a steamer leaves West Tarbert for Islay daily; the village is likewise connected by telegraph with Glasgow, Inveraray, Oban, Lochgilphead, Campbeltown, and the Island of Islay.

WEST TARBERT is one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay. It is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. The scenery on either side of the loch is remarkably picturesque, embracing mountain, wood and lawn, with an occasional mansion embosomed in foliage. Two roads branch respectively to the east and west sides of the loch. The road to Ardpatrick winds through a fine well wooded country. About the sixth mile on this road is Dunmore, the residence of Miss Mary Campbbell; the house is hid by its plantations from the road, but from its site there is a pleasing view of the loch and the opposite shore, Four miles further on is the domain of Ardpatrick, the residence of Captain James Carter Campbell, R.N., possessing every requisite for a summer residence. At the foot of this domain is a ferry, by which the traveller may pass to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrick a road branches to the west; and at a distance of four miles Carse is passed; eight miles beyond this is Drimdrissaig, the property of the late Dugald M'Neill, Esq., the efforts of whose predecessor—the late Lachlan M'Neill, Esq.—proved so successful in improving the breeds of cattle, sheep, &c., in this part of the country. A mile and a half beyond Drimdrissaig is Ormsary, the seat of J. H. Campbell, Esq. A new road, running by the edge of West Tarbert loch (to save the hill on the main road) past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, will be found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail coach passes daily both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbeltown. Near the sixth milestone is the village of WHITEHOUSE, containing a Board school, and about half a mile above the village is Stonefield, a fine mansion and extensive domain of the Trustees of Colin G. Campbell, Esq. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. In 1881 Tarbert contained a population of 1,629.

TOBERMORY,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF MULL, STAFFA, IONA, ULVA, TIREE AND COLL, AND THE DISTRICTS OF ARDNAMURCHAN AND MORVEN.

TOBERMORY is a thriving seaport and watering place on the north coast of the Island of Mull, 171 miles W.N.W. of Edinburgh, 62 N.W. of Ioveraray, and 30 N.W. of Oban. It encircles the extremity of a fine sheltered bay, and is one of the safest harbours among the western isles, being protected from the sound of Mull by an island, called Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour—though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the sound of Mull, a lighthouse, called the Runagall, was erected in 1857, which has proved of great service to vessels passing that way. The town is between two and three miles from the mainland of Morven, and derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called "Mary's Well," to which the vulgar superstitiously ascribe many imaginary virtues. The Spanish admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Armada," when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to his Majesty George IV., on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun that belonged to the same vessel, and found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification, understood to be of Norwegian origin. Tobermory formerly belonged to the British Society for extending the fisheries and improving the sea coast of the kingdom, but is now the property of Alexander Allan, Esq., of Aros. The town, which was built in 1788, along with Ullapool, by the British Fishing Company, as the site of a fishing establishment and the rendezvous of herring vessels, possesses two quays. A new quay was begun in 1885, by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, which was quite dry at low water; this subsequently proving inadequate, has been absorbed in a new quay and pier, undertaken and constructed by F. W. Caldwell, Esq., proprietor of this part of the town, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. It is deeper, more capacious, and in every respect an improvement, and was opened in 1864, with offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen. It is a little to the north of the old quay, and nearer to the entrance of the bay. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels, which renders better quay accommodation necessary. As the only town in Mull and a large circumjacent district, both Hebridean and continental, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, is established here, and occupies a handsome building of stone, completed in 1865. It is situated in the main street, and contributes much to the improvement of the town. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, a fine building.

The places of worship are in connection with the Established, Free, and Baptist denominations. The Free church is a neat building, a large proportion of its cost having been defrayed by Alexander Allan, Esq., of Aros, one of the two local proprietors. The Established church is a somewhat plain building, built in 1827-8, but occupies a commanding situation overlooking the bay and island. The public schools adjoin the Established church, and are in every respect a most creditable institution; there is also a female Industrial school. There are four hotels, the principal one being the Western Isles, erected in 1882-3, and is a very fine building, situated on a bold and elevated position above the principal pier. First-class accommodation may also be had at the Royal and Mishnish Hotels. The Temperance Institute, the generous gift to the town of Alexander Allan, Esq., of Aros, is of recent erection, and includes a reading room, well supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c., billiard room, circulating library, and hall, capable of seating between 300 and 400 persons. In the immediate neighbourhood is a beautiful loch called Mary's Lake, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. This pleasing spot belongs to Alexander Allan, Esq., and the elegant mansion erected on the banks of the lake has recently undergone extensive repairs. The tourist will be much gratified by visiting this picturesque scenery, including the three cascades, one of which is particularly grand. Commandingly situated above the town are the County Buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's offices, &c. Here the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court every Wednesday during session; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the Islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tiree, Ulva, and in Morven. By ascending a hill in the neighbourhood, a view of the islands of Tiree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance is obtained. The union poorhouse, erected for the reception of the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, is capable of accommodating 130 inmates, and cost £7,700. The quoad sacra parish of Tobermory contained in 1881 a population of 1,353.

MULL, which is about 26 miles long, and in some places 24 miles broad, has been much improved of late. Beinmore, the highest mountain in the island, is said to approach 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The island contains many remains of ancient castles, &c., among which are those of Duart, once the stronghold of the chief of the Macleans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles. On the western side, close to to the Ross of Mull, is worked a quarry of red granite of porphyry, some of which was employed by the Duke of Sutherland in the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. Fairs in Mull: at Salen, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday, and for cattle and sheep on the Tuesday before the second Wednesday in May, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October; at Craiganure, Morven, and the islands of Coll and Tiree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen. The Mull Agricultural Association, under the presidency of the Duke of Argyll, holds an annual show of cattle and produce at Salen about the middle of September. Population in 1881, 5,229.

The celebrated Island of STAFFA is about 15 miles distant from Mull. To give a description of this magnificent production of nature is, it must be confessed, extremely difficult. All who have seen Fingal's Cave concur in the opinion that, when it first bursts upon the view, the effect is indescribable—awe and astonishment so completely fill the mind that there is no room for minor emotions. The island, when seen from a distance, appears a round, lumpish, uninteresting rock, and not till approached within less than a quarter of a mile does it unfold to the visitor the museum of wonders. It is irregularly oval, extending from north to south, and measuring about one mile and a half in circumference; it presents an uneven table-land resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are so numerous that they may be said to perforate at brief intervals the whole face of the island; but those that occur on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty nor for magnitude; and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for making loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, and which resemble the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest which challenge the visitor's notice and admiration are—first, the Scallop, or Clamshell Cave; second, Buachaille, or Herdsman; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's or Great Cave; fifth, the Boat Cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave. At the Scallop or Clamshell Cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breath at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille the Herdsman is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here presents an extensive surface. It is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. This alone exceeds the noted "Giant's Causeway," as well in dimensions as in the diversity of its surface. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east, in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the Great Face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat, insipid mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave (though little visited in consequence of the fraud and indolence of the boatmen) is easy of access, and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat Cave is accessible only by the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's Cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

The far-famed island of IONA, or ICOLMKILL, or ICCLUMB-KILL, or I (pronounced Ee), the Island of the CELL OF COLUMBA, the earth of which may be termed royal, is about three miles in length and one and a half in breadth. It was once the luminary of the Caledonian regions, "whence savage clans and roving barbarians derived the benefits of knowledge and the blessings of religion." It is separated from Mull by a channel of about a mile in width; it is 9 miles S.W. of Staffa, and about 36 W. of the nearest part of the district called Morven, on the mainland of Scotland, and is resorted to during summer by the antiquarian, the historian, the tourist, and even the fashionable, who crowd numerously, some to explore or examine, and others to behold and admire the sacred ruins that on landing arrest the attention of every stranger; these are pointed out by a person deputed by his Grace the Duke of Argyll. Here the visitor finds himself surrounded by the graves of those who were royal and noble and holy in Caledonia and Hibernia a thousand years ago; while the thick walls, the massive arches, and the finely-wrought pillars of the many sacred edifices which in remote ages flourished in this sanctified isle, supply the deepest reflections, and awaken the most solemn feelings in the contemplative mind. A parliamentary church was erected here in 1828, and there is also a parliamentary school. The inhabitants have made a profitable traffic by disposing of the channel pebbles to visitors, who now frequent the island. They assert that the pebbles of a certain appearance are endowed with many secret virtues, given to them by their tutelar saint, Columba. Population in 1881 (with Kilfinichen and Kilvickeon), 1,995.

PORT-NA-CURRACH, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the curragh, the hide boat of St. Columba.

The ISLE of ULVA, separated from Mull by a channel of about one hundred yards broad, is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There are a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 ft. long, 58 ft. broad, and 30 ft. in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height, directly into the sea. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark, Esq. J.P. who resides there.

TIREE, westward of Mull, and distant 30 miles from Tobermory, is a fertile island, 14 miles long, and from one to five broad. It abounds in marble, of which it is said the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but for some unexplained cause, the quarries cannot be profitably worked. In the churchyard at Soroby is a beautiful monumental cross, inscribed "Soror Anna Abbatissa de Y." There is a harbour at Heynish, and a quay which was built in 1836; the accommodation is, however, deemed insufficient. A lighthouse was likewise raised on the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 16 miles S.W. of Tiree. It is of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull, and is considered one of the best and most durable specimens of this kind of architecture in Europe; the light is dioptric. Fairs are held in May, on the Wednesday before that at Mull in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull. Population in 1881, 2,733.

COLL, to the north of Tiree, is rather a sterile and mountainous island; it is 14 miles in length, and about two and a half in breadth, and seven miles distant from Mull. On it are the ruins of a castle, which appear to advantage from the sea. A fair is held here in May, on the Tuesday before those in Mull. Population in 1881, 643.

ARDNAMURCHAN is chiefly known from the dangers frequently encountered in the navigation around its projecting point, particularly in boisterous weather, when the tremendous billows of the North Atlantic break against it with awful fury. It is a district of considerable length, having Loch Sunart to the south, the Atlantic to the west, the same ocean and Loch Shiel to the north, and Ardgour to the east. It is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep and some cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. Upon the point has been erected a lighthouse by the Commissioners of the Northern Lights, which is of great service in the navigation of this perilous coast.

At STRONTIAN, fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday; June, on Friday after third Thursday (o.s.); August, for lambs, on Wednesday if 12th, if not, following Wednesday; and October, on Thursday before last Wednesday. In 1881 Ardnamurchan and Strontian had a population of 4,102.

MORVEN is an extensive district, bounded on the south-west by the sound of Mull, on the north by Loch Sunart, and on the east and south-east by Loch Linnhe. The country is hilly, and its shores are partially wooded. It is principally occupied in grazing farms, and contains several respectable gentlemen's seats, but no village of sufficient importance to command attention.

In concluding our brief sketch of these interesting and not wholly unimportant islands, and the parallel districts on the mainland, we may observe that the scenery connected with them is of a description not easily to be forgotten by those who have once visited them; it is faithfully pourtrayed by the incomparable Scott in is "Lord of the Isles." Ardtornish Castle, in Morven, so often alluded to by the bard, is well worthy the tourist's notice; as are the interesting remains of Aros Castle, the ancient residence of the Kings or Lords of the Isles, and Castle Duart, formerly the residence of the M'Leans, in Mull, with Castle Doonan, in the district of Lismore.

AYRSHIRE.

THIS is a populous maritime county, on the western coast of the Lowlands. From Skelmorlie in the north to the mouth of the Gallowayburn (which enters Loch Ryan) in the south, the distance is 63 miles, but along the coast it is 84; between Hareshaw Hill and Troon, which is its greatest breadth, it measures 28 miles; 19, however, being about the average. It is bounded on the north and north-east by the small county of Renfrew, on the east by the counties of Lanark and Dumfries, on the south-east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and on the south by Wigtownshire. In figure the county resembles an elongated crescent, with its concavity presented to the sea. At the north and south ends the land is diminished almost to a point, being but a few miles in breadth. The superficial extent of the county comprises 1,149 square miles of land, or 735,262 acres, of which 13,033 acres are under water. It is divided into three principal or grand districts—Carrick, Cunningham, and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine and Kyle division is situated between the rivers Doon and Irvine.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were, in the course of time, over-run by and amalgamated with the Scoto-Irish from Kintyre. In 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle. From 843 to 1097, the inhabitants of Ayrshire were governed as a Celtic people, on Celtic principles. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced, which peopled every district with new comers from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil during the wars of Bruce and Edward. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Some of the valorous exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, were performed in this county. Scarcely any division of Scotland remained so long under the torments of the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn had their spective quarrels of long standing, which occasionally ended in reckless violence or sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiewicks of certain districts. Besides the feuds of these pugnacious barons, the country was frequently distracted by the pride or crimes of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commentator, of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered by such an ill-organised system seemed to have impressed them with a fervid desire for those political liberties which they believed were to accrue from the institution of the Covenant. The consequence was that, during the heats of the seventeenth century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive to its proper objects. In July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherin several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III., and the conduct of the people who went armed to Edinburgh, to wait upon the estates, was very magnanimous. It need hardly be mentioned that the turmoils which had from a very early period kept Ayrshire in a warlike attitude, and ever ready for tidings of disaster and spoliation, had the natural effect of keeping its agricultural capacities long shut up, and its energies of a useful tendency long untried.

SOIL, SURFACE, &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly, wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its eastern boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land; and with little variation the surface inclines either to the sea or to the rivers which flow in that direction. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours. In the rocks are several remarkable caves, worthy the inspection of the curious. Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counties on the east coast. The principal eminences are:—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairntable, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake, 1,711; Knockdolian, 1,950; Black Craig, 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirriereoch Hill, 2,562 feet. There are many elegant seats belonging to the nobility and gentry of the kingdom; among the principal owners are the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Eglinton, the Marquis of Ailsa, the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Bute, and the noble family of Hastings. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochranes, Earls of Dundonald. The ancient castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—It was not until about the middle of the eighteenth century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun, in Lorn Castle, may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement. By her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principals, under the skilful directions of intelligent stewards. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry in the management of land according to the most approved methods of the experienced agriculturist. Observing the peculiarities of the climate, and ascertaining the nature of the soil, the judicious culture of the various species of grasses became a primary object, and the general adoption of dairy farms was the natural consequence. This system has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market wheresoever offered, and Ayrshire may now be reckoned as the Cheshire of Scotland. Latterly, under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been very generally introduced, and with very great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. Oats are extensively grown, the other crops being wheat, barley, rye, flax, turnips, potatoes, beans, &c. The breed of cattle has likewise been much improved, the Aryshire short-horns being much prized, both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. As agriculture thus successfully progressed, excellent roads were formed, and these have been followed up by railways for the transmission of goods and persons; a line was formed as far as Girvan, but is now carried on to Stranraer, and from thence to Portpatrick. From the fostered spirit of industry, and the enhanced value of land, resulted a corresponding exertion for the establishment of manufactures; the abundance of fuel, the plenty and cheapness of the necessaries of life, materials for building, and means of transit to the large towns in the adjacent shires, presented facilities for this purpose which were obvious and encouraging. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county have been established dye works, woollen manufactories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Kilbirnie are several works for the manufacture of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fancy wood-work articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory; at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine, chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works. Fishing is also carried on at all the large seaports, herring, cod, ling, &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. During the forty years between 1841 and 1881, the population of this county had increased 53,148. This large addition to the population is in a great measure owing to the prosperous manufacturing state of the county. Ayrshire possesses inexhaustible coalfields, freestone quarries, and ironstone mines, with several rich ores, particularly those of lead and copper, but the two latter have not been wrought to any great extent; marble, gypsum, and marl have been found, and black lead has been discovered; fire-proof stone and whetstone are obtained, and petrefactions exist in various parts of the county. In the hills of Carrick are agates, porphyries, and other valuable fossils; and traces of antimony have not escaped the searching eye of the mineralogist.

RIVERS, LAKES, SPRINGS, AND RAILWAYS.—In the ridge of the hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr, and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr, and the Lugar, traverse the county, and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the Doon river flows. Ayrshire participates extensively in the conveniences afforded to commerce and general transit by railways. The Glasgow and South-Western enters the county from Glasgow and passes Beith, Kilbirnie, and Dalry, from which latter place a branch runs on to New Cumnock, and thence by Dumfries to Carlisle; while another traverses the county by Kilwinning, Ayr and Girvan to Stranraer. There are also branches from Kilwinning to Ardrossan, from Ayr to Dalmellington, Mauchline and Muirkirk; one from Auchinleck joining the latter at Cronberry; one from Kilmarnock to Troon; and one from Irvine to Kilmarnock. The Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint Line runs from Glasgow to Kilmarnock, and there is also one from Ardrossan to Largs.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIL DIVISIONS, POPULATION, &C.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow; and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions before mentioned. The county now comprises forty-six parishes, forming two presbyteries in the Synod of Ayr and Glasgow. The contributory burghs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the Senate), belonging to this county are Ayr and Irvine; two members also represent the shire at large. The present county members are: for the Northern division, the Hon. Hugh F. H. Elliot; and for the Southern division, the Hon. Greville R. Vernon. The lord lieutenant of the county is the Earl of Stair, K.T. The county by the Government returns for 1871 contained a population of 200,809, and by those for 1881, 217,519, exhibiting an increase of over 1871 of 16,710. The parliamentary constituency of the Northern division of the county in 1887-8 was 11,231, that of the Southern division being 14,750. The valuation of the county (including railways) for 1887-8 is £1,055,690. The number of inhabited houses in 1881 was 41,733; uninhabited, 3,316; and in course of erection, 260.

ARDROSSAN,

A WATERING place and maritime port in the parish of its name, is pleasantly situated on the western shore of Ayrshire, on an accessible point of the coast, and only a mile west of Saltcoats; it is 74 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, 30 S.W. of Glasgow, 25 S.S.W. of Paisley, and 8 N. by W. of Irvine. The town is built upon a plan of regularity and taste, the houses being all of stone and of commanding altitude. The visitants in the bathing season will find all the appliances necessary to their enjoyment. The baths include the customary varieties, and are enclosed in a handsome building, both spacious and commodious. The town is indebted for its existence to the noble family of Eglinton, the Earl having a mansion in the town. There are a number of villas, many of which exhibit considerable taste in design; and the town is extending in all directions. A large and elegant hotel was erected by a late Lord Eglinton, at an expense of £10,000. The public rooms, the bed rooms, offices, and stabling are most commodious. There are three banking establishments—the Bank of Scotland, a commanding building adjoining the hotel; the Royal Bank of Scotland near to the railway, also a fine building; and the Union Bank of Scotland, in Princes street. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of the before-named munificent patron, who expended nearly £100,000 upon it. His successors continued to improve it until 1886, when it was sold to a company, the present Earl retaining a very large interest in it, and guaranteeing a dividend of 4½ per cent for several years. A new dock is being constructed, which, when completed, will be one of the best in Scotland, as a large depth of water is provided for. The present dock occupies an area of seven Scotch acres, and admits 50 vessels of from three to six hundred tons burden. The Glasgow and South-Western railway for many years had a monopoly of the carrying trade of the harbour; but this year (1888) the Ayrshire and Lanarkshire railway is expected to be opened, when direct communication will be had with the Lanarkshire coalfields on the one hand, and Ireland and England on the other. At present steamers ply regularly between Ardrossan and several parts of Ireland, and there is daily intercourse during the greater part of the year between it and the Island of Arran. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, an engineering works, a large iron foundry, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills.

The church, at the entrance to the town from Saltcoats, is in elegant taste, and is a highly ornamental edifice. There are four other church, viz., the English Episcopal, United Presbyterian, Free, and Independent. There has been erected at the head of the town, a commodious school, under the Scotch Education Act, built to accommodate about 670 children. In the neighbourhood is a chalybeate spring, whose medicinal properties are beneficial in cases of debility, scrofula, &c. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence a handsome monument, erected to a deceased philanthropic gentleman who, during the latter years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. An agricultural society has been established here. A fair is held on the Tuesday before that of Ayr, which is in July. There is also a weekly grain market. Population of the parish (the area of which is 7,341 acres), in 1871, 7,232, and in 1881, 7,777; of the town, 4,036.

AYR,

NEWTON AND WALLACETOWN, PRESTWICK AND MONKTON, AND THE PARISHES OF AYR, NEWTON, MONKTON, AND ST. QUIVOX, AND SURROUNDING NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AYR is a royal burgh, and the capital of the county and parish of that name, 77 miles w.s.w. of Edinburgh, 33 s.s.w. of Glasgow, 34 s.s.w. of Paisley, 12 s.s.w. of Kilmarnock, and 11 s. of Irvine; situated in the north-west angle of the parish, where the river Ayr flows past it into the Frith of Clyde. This portion of Scotland has been inhabited from the earliest period of authentic history; for when, in the reign of Severus, the Roman fleet made the complete seaboard survey of Magna Britannica, this part of the coast was crowded with a population that evinced no amicable disposition towards the foreign intruder. Subsequently, however, the persevering and insidious encroacher penetrated through southern Caledonia, and the Celtic harp was hushed by the fanning wings of the Roman eagle. Accordingly we find that the site of modern Ayr retained in the eleventh century the undoubted traces of a Roman station, and tradition informs us that a hamlet, the vestige of this station, was in existence until the latter part of the 12th century, when William, surnamed the Lion, erased the odious blot, and laid the foundation of a new town in the ashes of the former conqueror. Here it was that the renowned William Wallace first openly embodied that hardy host which made the southerner "backward reel," and the powerful garrison of Edward I. was compelled to cower under his "thunder arm." There is still a remnant of the venerable church of St. John, converted by Cromwell into a fort. Attached to the old tower of St. John is a residence in the old baronial style, so that this remnant of a bygone age is likely to survive for many generations to come. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenan Castle, one of those uncouthly constructed square castles so frequently arresting the attention of the stranger in this district; it stands on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea, and, from a distance, has an imposing aspect. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the celebrated Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. The bay of Ayr is very much admired, and its graceful curve bears a striking resemblance to the beautiful bay of Naples. The river is crossed by two bridges—one, the old bridge, or "Auld Brig o' Ayr," is one of the few remaining relics of the ancient burgh, and a fine specimen of the architecture of the 12th century, being still in a very perfect state of presevation. The other is the new bridge, the original of which was erected in the days of Burns. In fulfillment of the prophecy of the poet, the bridge some years ago became a "shapeless cairn," and was replaced by a new erection of considerably greater width, and of apparently substantial workmanship; though there are not wanting prophets who say that the "auld brig" will live to see even it crumble. Immediately opposite, across the Frith of Clyde, is the Island of Arran, whose majestic mountains present some features of the sublime, and whose summits are visible to the naked eye, in fine weather, from which the headlands of Larne, in the county of Antrim, in Ireland.

The most conspicuous decoration of the town is the lofty spire, that rises to a height of 219 feet above the Town's buildings, which were erected in 1828, at a cost of £10,000. These buildings have since been largely added to by the addition of a spacious hall, suitable for public entertainments, and capable of containing comfortably 1,400, or, at a stretch, 2,000 people. A very fine organ has been put into the hall, at a cost of about £2,000. In addition, the buildings now afford accomodation for the Town Clerk, Tow n Chamberlain, and Corporation water works and other public offices of the burgh. In these buildings are now kept the burgh records, and the burgh courts are held here. The noble tower, called "Wallace Tower," in High street, is another ornamental structure; it is embellished with a statue, by Thom, of the hero whose name it bears. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having a noble erection to form the west side in the court-house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. The east front of this edifice, which is wholly of stone, is ornamented with an imposing portico. A verdant lawn forms the centre of the square, enclosed with iron railing, and the surrounding houses are chaste, though plain, in architecture. Two fine statues in bronze have been placed within the square—one to the memory of the late Right Hon. Archibald William, Earl of Eglinton and Winton, who was Lord Lieutenant of the county, also for some years Viceroy of Ireland, and who died in 1861; the other is to the memory of the late Brigadier General J. G. Neill, C.B. aide-de-camp to the Queen, who was killed at Lucknow on the 25th of September, 1857, and who was born in one of the houses in Wellington square. A large gun, captured at Sebastapol, is placed on an iron carriage in the enclosure round the County buildings, at the upper end of the square. In the County buildings are the public offices, in which are kept the records of the county, and here are held the courts for the county. Her Majesty's gaol is a commodious structure, at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay; it is arranged upon the most modern approved system of discipline. Considerable additions to the town, especially to the westward, have been made within the last twenty years. Many neat villas give accommodation to the natives of Glasgow and other inland localities, who repair to this fine watering place during the summer months. Among recent improvements made in the town, not the least is a broad substantial esplanade that has been formed along the shore, affording a fine carriage way as well as a promenade for foot passengers. In June, 1886, the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. opened a new and commodious station for the convenience of the greatly increasing traffic to this town, its platform covering a surface of 3,000 square feet. The company have also erected a large and handsome hotel adjoining the station; it is one of the best furnished hotels in Scotland, having every accommodation for tourists and business men.

An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-tar, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. Its imports comprise hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, spars, deals and hemp. The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by carrying an extensive stone pier into the sea, affording a greater depth of water for vessels entering, and security when in the harbour. A new dock has been built, eight acres in extent, with a quayage of 2,000 feet, at a cost of £150,000; it has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet. On the south beach, immediately adjacent to the esplanade, is a large ship-building yard, which was opened in 1883, and where iron vessels, ranging up to 2,000 tons, have since then been constructed.

The parliamentary and municipal burgh of Ayr embraces the greater part of Newton and Wallacetown. These parishes in conjunction with Ayr proper form the burgh of Ayr, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eleven councillors. Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Oban in Argyleshire, in returning a member to Parliament. The present representative is John Sinclair, Esq. The Lord Lieutenant of the county is the Right Hon. the Earl of Stair; vice Lieutenant, R. F. F. Campbell, Esq., and David Brand, Esq. is the sheriff. There are two members for the county, the gentlemen at present sitting being the Hon. Hew Elliot, Corwar, for North Ayrshire, and the Hon. Greville Richard Vernon, Auchans, Dundonald, for South Ayrshire.

An Academy, founded by subscription in 1798, stands foremost amongst the public establishments. It is conducted by a rector and four masters, with able assistants. The management of the academy was formerly vested in certain directors appointed by the Crown, by which the seminary was created a body corporate. The original building has been taken down, having become too limited for the number of pupils, and has been replaced by a very elegant building of larger proportions, erected at a cost of about £10,000. The management has now been transferred to the burgh School Board, the school now ranking as one of the high class schools under the Education Act. The education given is of a high order, and judged by results at the universities there are few schools in Scotland of the same class equal to it. Ayr library, which contains several thousand volumes, affords recreation to its numerous subscribers; it is now combined with the public library and reading room in Macneille buildings, Newmarket street, to which strangers are admitted on the payment of one penny each visit. These are also other libraries of lesser note. Four newspapers are published in Ayr namely, the Ayr Observer, on Tuesday and Friday; the Ayrshire Post on Friday; the Advertiser, on Thursday, and the Argus and Express' on Wednesday and Saturday. Races are held here annually in the autumn, an excellent pack of foxhounds hunts the county, and spirited curling and bowling clubs are located here.

There are three churches of the Establishment in the town, two in the parish of NEWTON, and one in WALLACETOWN. The other places of worship in Ayr and its vicinity are for the Free Church, the United Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists, Moravians, Original Seceders, Evangelical Unionists, and Roman Catholics. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted; the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations; and a dispensary gives medicine and surgical aid to the sick. A large and handsome hospital has been erected, also an industrial school, an institution which has been most successfully conducted here and has done much good. Besides these are a Sailors' Society, instituted in 1581; a Merchants' Society, established in 1655; a fund formed in 1821 for decayed members, their widows and orphans; the Ayr Sabbath School Union Society; and the Ayr Universal Society.

The Scottish bard, Robert Burns, whose 100th anniversary was so universally celebrated throughout the civilized world on the 25th of January, 1859, was born about two miles south of Ayr, in a small cottage, which formerly belonged to the Incorporation of Shoemakers of Ayr, and was long let by them for a public house, but is now the property of the trustees of the Burns' Monument, who have placed a person there to take charge of the building, a small fee being taken from visitors for admission. A collection of Burns' relics has been formed, and the grounds are neatly laid out, making the whole much more worthy of the poet. About a quarter of a mile from the house, a very elegant monument has been erected to his memory; it is placed on the banks of the river Doon, amidst objects and scenery which had often inspired his muse; and the locality in which the scene was laid of his much-admired poem "Tam o' Shanter," lies in the immediate neighbourhood of the cottage. In the summer season this place is visited by strangers from nearly all parts, anxious to view the monument, Alloway's Auld Haunted Kirk, and the Brig o' Doon. An elegant and commodius parish church has been erected close to the monument, of which the Rev. S. Marcus Dill, M.A., is pastor. The Chevalier Ramsay, author of "Cyrus' Travels," &c. was a native of this place. There are two weekly markets in the town—Tuesday for grain, cattle, and dairy produce, and Friday, for the sale of dairy produce, poultry, and general business. Fairs are held on the Thursday and Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April for hiring; the last Friday in April; the Thursday and Friday before the second Monday in July; third Tuesday in October for hiring; and on the second Thursday and Friday in October. The parish of Ayr comprises 6,939 acres. Population of the Parliamentary burgh in 1871, 17,851; in 1881, 20,812.

NEWTON parish is divided from that of Ayr by the river, which is spanned by the two bridges already referred to. On the Newton or north side of the river Ayr, are the principal manufactures of the town. There are two chemical works, a carpet manufactory, lace works, two shoe factories, and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and new dock, and, in consequence, the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here. A very large increase in the shipment of coal has recently taken place; indeed Ayr has taken the lead as a coal shipping port on the west coast. Acreage, 585. Population of the parish in 1871, 4,877; in 1881, 6,511.

ST. QUIVOX, a populous parish, in the district of Kyle, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr and Monkton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations, and contains 4,876 acres. Population in 1871, 6,069; in 1881, 7,352.

WALLACETOWN consists of a number of streets adjoining to Newton, and is in the parish of St. Quivox. A church of the Establishment was erected in Wallacetown in 1836; it is a very handsome edifice, of the Gothic order. The site is well chosen, being in a populous neighbourhood, on the north-east bank of the river Ayr. It was built by subscription, at an expense of nearly £1,500, and has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. Nearly adjoining this church is a Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000; it is a chaste structure, in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone.

The small town (or rather village) of PRESTWICK, or Prestevicke, is about two miles from Ayr. It was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date; and its charter, which was renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair. The former has fallen into disuse, from the proximity of its more thriving neighbour, Ayr. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists, and it has its lock-up and council house. In the latter the bailies and freemen meet quarterly to regulate the affairs of the burgh; and the Prince of Wales is recognised as the superior of the town. There are Established, Free, and United Presbyterian churches, for the accommodation of the combined inhabitants of Monkton and Prestwick. Prestwick can boast of its fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for a long time. There are now two clubs—the Prestwick Golf Club, which has a large and handsome club house, and the St. Nicholas Club, both of them with large membership, and having among their numbers some of the finest players in the country. Each club has separate links. Close to the village is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western line of railway. Population in 1871, 750, and in 1881, 1,064.

MONKTON, a parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the sea coast, betwixt Symington and Dundonald on the north, and Newton and St. Quivox on the south. The parish formerly extended southward to the river Ayr, and comprehended the present parish of Newton, which was erected into a separate parochial district in the last century; it now includes the ancient parish of Prestwick. The village of Monkton is situated on the high road to Glasgow, and is distant four miles from Ayr. There is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway about a mile from the village. Acreage of parish, 3,971. Population of the joint parish of Monkton and Prestwick in 1871, 1,744, and in 1881, 2,121.

BALLANTRAE,

BARRHILL, COLMONELL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BALLANTRAE is a small seaport, in the parish of that name, 105 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 68 S.W. from Glasgow, 31 S. of Ayr, 24 N.N.E. of Portpatrick, 18 N. of Stranraer, 13 S. by W. of Girvan, and 25 S.S.W. of Maybole, situated near the south-western extremity of the county, and on the banks of the river Stinchar, which here falls into the Frith of Clyde. The approach to the town from Stranraer is over the river, across which is an excellent stone bridge of three well-proportioned arches. On the right, near the bridge, stand the ruins of Ard-Stinchar Castle, formerly belonging to the Hamilton family. The place is principally supported by its herring and salmon fishery, the latter belonging to the Earl of Stair. The chief local proprietor is James Hunter, Esq. J.P. of Glenapp, whose mansion may be seen from the village. Old Kirkcudbright kirk, now in ruins, gives a mournful yet pleasing effect to the surrounding scenery. A considerable number of new buildings have recently been erected, amongst which the new Free church is conspicuous. A new burial ground has been added to the old church. The Established church is a neat modern building, ornamented with stone, in the plain Gothic style. There are four schools in the parish. The nearest court is held at Girvan, where small debts are recoverable only by summons. Ballantrae is without either fairs or weekly markets. The acreage of the parish is 33,561, the population of which in 1871 was 1,277, and in 1881, 1,442; that of the village being 426.

COLMONELL is a parish of 47,490 acres, bounded on the north and west by the mouth of the Clyde. The village, which is pleasantly situated and is much frequented by visitors during the summer months, is three miles W. from Pinwherry station on the Girvan and Portpatrick line, five miles E. by N. of Ballantrae, on the north bank of the Stinchar—a stream famed for its salmon and trout. There are Established and Free churches and Board schools in the villages of Colmonell and Barrhill, and also Board schools in the districts of Cowar, Lendalfoot, and Pinwherry, in this parish. The extent of this district is 20 miles in length by nine broad. Population of the parish in 1871, 2,293, and in 1881, 2,191.

The picturesque ruins of Craigneil, Kirkhill, Knockdolian, Pinwherry, Knockdaw, and Carleton castles are to be seen in this parish, which also abounds in lime. The nearest approximation for persons desirous of visiting the far-famed Ailsa Craig is from LENDALFOOT, in this neighbourhood. There are four quarterly cattle markets at the village of BARRHILL, eight miles distant, in this parish.

BARR

IS a parish of 54,876 acres, lying on the banks of the rivers Gregg and Stinchar. The village, a small and neat one, is eight miles E. by S. from Girvan, and 21 S. from Ayr. The greatest part of the parish is intersected by the river Gregg; and about a mile from the village are the ruins of old Kirk Dominae. Barr parish is principally sheep pasture; its extent is twelve miles by nine. The hiring fair for servants, which of late was held at Kirk Dominae, is now held at Barr on the first Thursday after the 26th of May. The chief landed proprietors of the entire district are the Marquis of Ailsa, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., Captain Hamilton, and Arthur Onslow, Esq. The public erections are an Established church and a Free church, and there are also two schools in the parish, which are under the School Board. Population of the parish in 1871, 672 and in 1881, 600.

BEITH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BEITH is a market and post town, in the parish of that name, district of Cunninghame, 62 miles W. by S. of Edinburgh, 19½ S.W. of Glasgow, 11 S.S.W. of Paisley, five N. by E. of Dalry, and 12 N. by E. of Saltcoats. It it situated near the confines of Renfrewshire, on an eminence commanding a fine and extensive view of the beautifully diversified country around, of which the Loch of Kilbirnie, at the distance of about a mile, forms a charming feature. The town, which contains many excellent houses, is gas-lighted and well supplied with good water by gravitation, and presents a clean, healthy appearance. In the immediate neighbourhood there are several handsome private residences, and it is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here by Messrs. Crawford Brothers, both for home and export trade. The leather trade is of considerable importance, in the tanning, currying and preparation of which several firms are actively engaged. Another branch particularly deserving of notice is the cabinet making and upholstery business, extensively carried on by several enterprising firms, the more eminent being Messrs. John Pollock, Matthew Pollock, Robert Balfour, J. & J. Gardiner, and Wilson & Galt; the wholesale manufacture of couches, chairs, &c. by machinery, affording constant employment to a numerous staff of workmen. The manufacture of silk goods was formerly extensive, but this has almost been entirely superseded by that of cotton and woollen, in the weaving of which many of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. Silk printing is in full operation at the establishment of Messrs. Hugh Melville & Co. at Roebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent, and rope making is also carried on by Messrs. Matthew Wylie & Son. Three banking houses are established in the town; they are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited. Railway accommodation is amply supplied by the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Company and the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway.

The whole of the parish of Beith is enclosed and sub-divided, and is almost all arable. The tenants of this and the neighbouring parish of Dunlop were formerly noted for their manufacture of cheese, known by the name of "Dunlop cheese," which was held in as high estimation in Scotland as the cheese of Cheshire or Gloucestershire is in England. The constabulary station with court house adjoining, is a neat stone building, opened in 1884, erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Sheriff's Small Debt Court is held on the first Thursday in February, May, August and November, and that for the Justice of the Peace on the first Monday in each month. In 1807 a very handsome church of the Establishment, with tower, was erected on the most elevated part of the town; its site is 343 feet above the level of the sea. It has since been enlarged by the addition of a new wing, reseated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000. The other places of worship are a Free church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and two for United Presbyterian congregations. The town house was built by subscription in 1817. The upper part of the building contains a court room and reading room; the lower part consists of shops, the rents of which are applied to purposes of public benefit. There are several well-attended schools, besides one or two private establishments. At GIFFEN, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hasselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a druidical remain, known by the name of "Rockingstone." Two large stone coffins, supposed to be likewise of druidical origin, were discovered here many years ago. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Fridays in January and February, and first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August, and the first Friday after the 12th November (old style). The entire parish of Beith (a small portion of which is in Renfrewshire) contains an area of 11,222 statute acres, having in 1871 a population of 6,233, and in 1881, 6,555; of this number 4,037 were returned for the town.

POST OFFICE, Main Street, John Smith, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at 7 and 9 a.m. and 2 30 p.m., and from Edinburgh, Glasgow, and South of Scotland at 6 p.m., and are despatched to Edinburgh, Glasgow, South of Scotland, England, and South of Ireland, at 11 50 a.m.; to Glasgow, North of England, North of Ireland, Paisley, Ayr, Kilmarnock, and Dalry at 4 50 p.m.; to England, Ireland, Scotland, foreign and all parts at 6 50 p.m., and to Glasgow and all parts of Scotland at 9 10 p.m. Sunday—To all parts at 2 55 p.m.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

CATRINE IN SORN, AND MAUCHLINE.

CATRINE, is a thriving manufacturing village in the parish of Sorn, 72 miles W.S.W. of Edinburgh, 32 S. of Glasgow, 11 N.E. of Ayr, 12 S.S.W. of Kilmarnock, 5 N. from Old Cumnock, and 4 N. from Ochiltree; pleasantly situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. This place has risen from insignificance to a considerable town. In 1787 its site contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill. The cause of this rapid increase was the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander, Esq., of Ballochmyle, who having acquired a large fortune in the East Indies, purchased the land for the purpose of establishing works thereon, by which he might increase the value of his property here. The business is now carried on by Messrs. James Finlay & Co. The machinery of the mills is driven by two large water wheels, which were erected by the late Sir William Fairbairn, of Manchester, in 1828. They are each 12 feet wide, and 50 feet in diameter. Both wheels work on one shaft and have a power of 500 horses. These extensive works employ a large number of hands. There is a public library, the funds of which were raised by subscription; it contains about 3,000 volumes, and has upwards of 200 members. Schools were erected at a cost of £2,000; they are in the Elizabethan style, and are situated on the south side of the river Ayr. Sorn Castle, about a mile and a half from Catrine, once the seat of the London family, is now the property and residence of James Somervell, Esq. J.P., who with Henry Farquhar, Esq., the heirs of of Lady Boswell, and Major-General Sir Claud Alexander, Bart., are the principal heritors of the parish of Sorn, which abounds with coal, limestone and ironstone. Dugald Stewart, Esq., the late celebrated professor of moral philosophy in Edinburgh, was born in the neighbourhood of Catrine.

The parish of Sorn is bounded on the east by Muirkirk, on the south by Auchinleck, on the west by Mauchline, and on the north by Galston and Strathaven; its form is nearly square, measuring about six and a half miles each way, and containing 19,195 acres. Formerly this parish formed a part of the extensive one of Mauchline—the parish church standing about three miles distant from that village. The land, originally moorish, has been much improved and well enclosed, and there are fine plantations near the Ayr, which river runs through the parish from east to west. Population of the parish in 1871, 4,032, and in 1881, 4,255; Catrine containing 2,638 of this number.

MAUCHLINE, a considerable town and capital of its parish, is two and a half miles W. from Catrine, situated in a pleasant part of the county, and surrounded on all sides by a delightful country interspersed with several elegant mansions. In the manufacture of a beautiful description of fancy boxes, &c. in sycamore wood, tartan, &c., for which this town has long been noted, two firms are engaged—Messrs. W. & A. Smith and Messrs. J. Davidson & Son, the former having long enjoyed the patronage of royalty; whilst Messrs. T. & A. Kay have a world-wide reputation for the manufacture of their famous curling stones. The buildings of the town are neat and possess an air of pleasing variety. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure, well deserving the notice of the antiquarian. The parish school is well conducted and numerously attended. Burns resided several years at Mossgiel, a small farm, about half a mile to the north of Mauchline, on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock. The steading may still be seen, environed by a few trees, as well as the fields, in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort, when he visited Mauchline, was the public-house of John Dow—a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the church yard gate, now entirely re-built and occupied as houses and shops. The cottage of "Poosie Nancy," or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the "Jolly Beggars," stands more immediately opposite the church yard gate. Mauchline kirk, the scene of the "Holy Fair," was of the pure barn species. There is now an elegant church, in the Gothic style, with a steeple. In the surrounding cemetery may been seen the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nanse Tinnock, Mary Morrison, and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns, and on the banks of the Ayr, at a short distance from Mauchline, is the scene of some of the bard's more pleasing poems—his lyrics particularly. Fairs are held first Thursday after the 4th of February, first Wednesday after 18th May, fourth Wednesday in June, first Wednesday in August, the 26th of September, the 4th of November, and the fourth Wednesday in December. The parish contains 8,907 acres, and had in 1871 a population of 2,435 persons, and in 1881, 2,504, of which latter number 1,616 belonged to the town.

CUMNOCK (NEW)

IS a parish of 48,096 acres, in the Kyle district. It was disjoined from Cumnock and formed into a separate parish about the year 1652. The village is 43 miles S. of Glasgow, 21 S.S.E. of Kilmarnock, the same distance W. by S. of Ayr, 10 N. by E. of Dalmellington, 12 W. by N. of Sanquhar, 24 N.W. of Thornhill, and five S.E. of Cumnock. The Glasgow and South-Western line of railway runs through the village, at which there is a station. The parish, which lies on the eastern boundary of that of Cumnock (or Old Cumnock), is in general hilly, and affords excellent pasture for sheep; but there are many spots of rich arable land. The river Nith takes its rise in the south-west end of the parish, and runs through the centre of the whole; and there are several small lakes, the sources of the Afton. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood, the property of William Hyslop, Esq., Lady Catheart, &c. and limestone abounds in different parts of the district. There are two banks, branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland. The church was erected in 1833; it is a neat and well-adapted building, sufficiently capacious for a congregation of 1,000 persons; there are likewise three Free churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, and several public schools. A new Town Hall is now (1888) being erected in the centre of the town, from plans by Mr. Allan Stevenson, of Ayr. The front is of Ballochmyle stone, and the interior of stone from Auchinleck. Towards its cost, which will be nearly £1,000, the Marquis of Bute has given £300, Lady Jane S. Menteith £200, and the Lanemark Coal Co. Ltd., £100, the remainder being raised by subscription. The building will contain a lecture hall to seat about 500 people, besides offices, &c. A subscription library was established in 1828; it contains upwards of 1,200 volumes. The parish of New Cumnock contained in 1871 a population of 3,434 persons, and in 1881, 3,781.

CUMNOCK (OLD) AND AUCHINLECK,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CRONBERRY, DARNCONNER, LUGAR, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CUMNOCK (or OLD CUMNOCK) is a considerable market and post town, in the parish of its name, 60 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, 16 E. of Ayr, and the same distance S.S.E. of Kilmarnock, situated on a line of road between Dumfries on the south-east and Glasgow on the north, 44 miles N.W. from the former town and 38 S. from the latter. It participates in the advantages of railway communication with all parts, the Glasgow and South-Western line having a station half a mile east, and the Ayr and Douglas line a station a quarter of a mile south of the town. The principal part of the town occupies the site of what was formerly the churchyard. The old churchyard at Barrhill, near the town, was at one period the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot, in 1685, by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the covenanted work of reformation; and the corpse of Pedan, a martyr of the covenanting body, who died in the parish of Sorn, was exhumed by a party of Dragoons, after being interred six weeks in the neighbouring churchyard of Auchinleck, and ignominiously buried at the gallows foot. A new cemetery was formed a few years ago a little to the south of the town, at a cost of about £1,000. The town, which is of an irregular triangle form, consists of a square and several streets, in which are a number of respectable establishments in the various branches of the retail trade. It is situated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Lugar waters; it was celebrated for the manufacture of those beautiful wooden snuff boxes—a species of trade which originated here above 70 years since, and, with some few exceptions, as Laurencekirk, Catrine and Mauchline, was confined to Cumnock. This branch is now extinct here. The manufacturing of various kinds of woollen fabrics, and wool spinning and dyeing have been introduced, and promise an important addition to the trade and industry of the place. Two engineering firms are actively engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements —Messrs. George M'Cartney & Co. having gained a degree of celebrity in the latter branch. Three banks are in operation, viz., a branch of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, one of the Bank of Scotland, and one of the Royal Bank of Scotland; there is also a public library, established in 1792, by a company of shareholders.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, one for the United Presbyterians, a chapel for Independents, one for the Baptists, recently erected at a cost of £800, and a Roman Catholic chapel, the cost of which was defrayed by the Marquis of Bute. In 1885 a handsome Town Hall was opened; it is erected in the Grecian style of architecture, from plans prepared by Mr. R. S. Ingram, of Kilmarnock, at a cost of nearly £3,000, towards which the Marquis of Bute contributed £500 and a free site. A few years ago the Marchioness of Bute built and furnished a hospital here at an expense of over £2,000; the whole cost being borne by her ladyship. Into this excellent institution the injured and the distressed of every religious creed are admitted with equal readiness. The sum of £20 annually, left for free education by the late Charles Duncan, merchant, of London, a native of this parish, has now, by the Commissioners of Endowments, been mostly applied to higher education in the public school, a commodious building of recent erection, and costing nearly £6,000. The castle of Terrenzean, now in ruins, is in the neighbourhood; it gives the title of baron to the family of Dumfries. About two miles E. from Cumnock is the village of LUGAR. Here are situated the works of the Eglinton Iron Co., who have built for their workmen and their families numerous comfortable and neat cottages, forming a considerable village. There is also a Co-operative Society, established for the purpose of supplying all necessaries to those who are employed by the Company, and there are also one or two other respectable shops and a corn mill. The market at Cumnock is held held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, the Thursday after the 6th of March, the Wednesday after the 6th of June, the 13th of July, and the 27th of October. The parish of Old Cumnock comprises 14,140 acres; population in 1871, 4,041, and in 1881, 4,861, of which number the town contained 3,845.

AUCHINLECK, signifying a field or rock, is a parish 18 miles in length by only about two in breadth, comprising 24,129 acres, watered on its northern extremity by the Ayr, and by the Lugar on the south. Coal and limestone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village, a respectable little place, is situated somewhat above a mile N. from Old Cumnock, and about three from Sorn and Catrine. Close to the village is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western line of railway. There is an establishment here for the manufacture of snuff boxes. The places of worship are an Established church and one belonging to a congregation of Original Seceders, and a chapel for Roman Catholics. At Birnie Knowe, about two miles from the village, the ruins of Auchinleck Castle stand in an angle formed by the Dippleburn and Lugar; and in the neighbourhood is the Place of Auchinleck, a handsome mansion, erected in the last century, by Lord Auchinleck senator of the college of justice, and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell, Esq., the friend and biographer of Johnson; the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A well attended fair for the sale of lambs is held annually on the last Tuesday in August. Population of the parish in 1871, 6,174, and in 1881, 6,681, of which number 1,528 belonged to the village.

LUGAR, before mentioned, is situated in the above parish, as is also CRONBERRY and DARNCONNER, both populous mining villages, the former about one mile N.E. and the latter about two miles N.W. of Lugar. There are stations at the two former places on the Ayr, Mauchline and Muirkirk section of railway. Population in 1881: Lugar, 1,353; Cronberry, 799; Darnconner, 550.

DAILLY

IS a parish in the district of Carrick. The village is 93 miles S.W. of Edinburgh (through Maybole and Ayr), 47 s. by W. of Glasgow, 46 N.N.E. of Portpatrick (by the new road, which is longer by three miles than along the coast), 15 s. by E. of Ayr, seven s. from Maybole, and six N.N.E. from Girvan. The situation of this village is not exceeded by any in the county for beauty. It is seated in a fine fertile valley, near to the pellucid waters of the Girvan, which is fed by a number of small streams, some of them descending through deep and woody glens, admired for their picturesque and romantic loveliness; while the elegant mansions of the affluent that are interspersed throughout the district, and the hoary ruins of two ancient castles, contribute to the general interest of the scenery. The parish is about six miles in length by about five in breadth, and contains 17,962 acres. The uplands are bleak and pastoral, but the more level parts are well cultivated, enclosed and planted. Coal and limestone abound in several parts of the parish. The celebrated AILSA CRAIG is in the parish. The chief local proprietors are the Countess of Stair, Sir James Fergusson, Bart., M.P. of Kilkerran, and F. T. R. Kennedy, Esq. The old parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, has fallen to decay; the present structure was erected in 1766. There are also a Free church, chapels for Evangelists and Plymouth Brethren, and two Board schools in the parish. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,932, and in 1881, 2,226; of the village, 696.

DALMELLINGTON,

CRAIG MARK, WATERSIDE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish, about 10 miles in length by three in breadth, containing 17,783 acres. The town, or village, a burgh of barony, is 72 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 49 S. of Glasgow, 42 N.W. of Dumfries, 24 S.S.E. of Kilmarnock, 15 S.E. of Ayr, 14 E. of Maybole, 12 S. of Old Cumnock, and 7 E. of Straiton: This thriving little place is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained of a varied character, comprising rude and lofty mountains and the softer features of cultivation. Besides the trade enjoyed by the town, it derives some advantage from being the resort of parties of pleasure and for fishing. Those who wish to partake of the latter amusement will find on the banks of Loch Doon neat boats furnished by the proprietors of the inns at this place—the Black Bull, the Cross Keys, and the Eglinton. The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore extending eight miles in length and one in breadth, abounding in trout of fine flavour. On an island in the lake are the remains of Balloch Castle. Some years since a fishing party discovered, at the bottom of the loch, what appeared to be boats, and having obtained the necessary assistance they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring 24 feet in length by four in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak. Two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; it is now preserved by Alexander F. M'Adam, Esq., of Craigengillae, for the inspection of visitors. In Dalmellington is a public library and a reading room well furnished with standard works, periodicals, and newspapers; a sum has been left in trust for the support of the latter, and the education of a certain number of children. Situated about three miles north-west from Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the extensive Dalmellington iron works and collieries. There are eight blast furnaces. This company not only built the villages of CRAIG MARK and WATERSIDE, but also many other houses situate on LETHAN HILL, BENWHAT, and KERSE. The village of Waterside is lighted by gas. The total population of their houses alone, which are occupied exclusively by their own workpeople and families, who occupy 800 houses, is upwards of 4,500. There are schools for the children of their workpeople at Craig Mark, Waterside, Kerse, Lethan Hill, and Benwhat, the one at Waterside being one of the finest private schools in the country. The company have stores for supplying the workpeople with the necessaries they require, they having been paid weekly for over 20 years. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches, an Evangelical Union chapel, and one for Roman Catholics. The school is under the School Board, and is a neat stone building, built in 1875, to accommodate 270 scholars, and, with the house for the schoolmaster, cost about £3,000. The parish of Dalmellington had in 1871 a population of 6,165, and in 1881, 6,383, the town containing 1,437.

DALRY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DALRY is a parish in the district of Cunninghame. The town is 69 miles W. by S. from Edinburgh, 25 (22 by rail) S.W. of Glasgow, 16 S.S.W. of Paisley, five S.W. of Beith, four N. of Kilwinning, and seven N. of Saltcoats; pleasantly situated on a rising ground, surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye and Garnock, which run in different directions near the village. The town consists of twelve streets, three of which diverge from a centre, forming a small square; many of the houses are well built, the shops are neat, the town is lighted with gas, and supplied with gravitation water, at a cost of £10,500, capable of affording 180,000 gallons per day. There are three reservoirs in this parish, that at Camphill and Routenburn supplies Paisley; that at Munnoch is for Irvine and district; and the one at Auld Muir for the town of Dalry. The sanitary arrangements are advantageously carried out by the local authorities. The branches of manufacture existing in the town and parish are those of worsted spinning (extensively carried on by Messrs. Biggart & Co. Limited, Bridgend Mills), and blanket manufacturing, by Messrs. Kyle, Aitken & Gardiner, at Ryeside Mills (the largest in Scotland), also tweeds and hosiery by other firms. The manufacture of wool may now be said to be the principal trade of this town. Two banks are established here, and lime, coal, and ironstone abound in the neighbourhood. One limestone quarry, at AUCHIENS-KEITH, two miles from Dalry, has been reported by scientific men to be particularly rich in geological remains. There are several public houses, and three hotels. Near to Dalry are extensive iron ore and coal mines belonging to the Eglinton Iron Co. and Messrs. Merry & Cuninghame. To the west is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a curious and singular appearance during the continuance of frost. In the centre of the town there was erected a few years ago, at a considerable expense, a very handsome granite fountain, presented by Thomas Biggart, Esq., of Baidland Hill, for the use of the inhabitants.

Two miles from Dalry is Blair House, an ancient pile of architecture, regarded as the oldest inhabited mansion in Scotland which has not been re-built, a portion of which retains the date of 1203, though the original tower even dates back to 1130. Both the exterior and interior are remarkable for their ancient appearance, and are in splendid preservation, the walls being of an extraordinary thickness. To facilitate communication from one part of the house to another, a passage four feet wide and thirty feet long was cut through a wall fourteen feet in thickness, and though the undertaking was refused by several contractors, was successfully executed under the direction of Captain W. F. Blair, R.N., the present resident, who courteously permits strangers to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds and his fine museum of foreign and British curiosities. Here is also a cave, evidently the work of nature, and well deserving the examination of visitors to this district. It is about 103 feet in length, and from 5 to 12 feet in height; the roof is encrusted with petrefractions, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. The interior resembles Gothic arched work, and near the middle it expands into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad, and 12 feet in height. In former times popular superstition peopled it with elves; it accordingly received the appellation of "elph-house;" in later days, under the arbitrary reign of Charles II., it afforded a refuge to the covenanters of this parish from the violence of their infuriated persecutors. This cave was supposed to have given refuge to Wallace after the burning of the "Barns of Ayr," and also his co-patriot Sir Bryce Blair, who was executed at Ayr by the English for the part he took with Wallace in the war of independence. The man who attended and supplied them with provisions was afterwards granted the farm, known by the name of "Wallace Fauld" adjoining the cave, which remained in possession of his heirs until the end of last century. In Dalry parish is also Camphill and Routingburn, where the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, in 1263. Dalry bestows the title of Baron upon the oldest son of the Earl of Glasgow.

Among the places of worship is the Established church—rebuilt and considerably enlarged, at a cost of nearly £6,000. The style is Gothic, designed and superintended by Mr. David Thomson, architect, Glasgow. It is surmounted by a lofty spire, and altogether its general appearance is very attractive. This edifice contains four beautiful stained glass windows, which were made at the Royal factory at Munich. The principal one was presented by Captain Blair R.N. of Blair; a second by Messrs. Baird & Co. of Glasgow; the third was the gift of the Misses Neil, of Swindridge Muir, in memory of their brother General Neil, who fell leading on his troops at the relief of Lucknow; and the fourth was presented by subscription from leading heritors of the parish. An auxiliary church of the Establishment, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel are the other places of worship. A memorial mission hall is now (1888) in course of erection. The building, which is of freestone, and favours the Gothic style of architecture, is estimated to cost between £3,000 and £4,000, which is being entirely defrayed by the Rev. Robert Stevenson, D.D. of this town. There are several public schools, one of which, formerly the parochial school, but now known as the West End Public School, has been considerably enlarged, at a cost of £3,000, and will accommodate about 700 children. The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the annual fair on the last day of July. Acreage of parish, 19,281; population in 1871, 10,885; in 1881, 10,215; of the latter number 5,010 were returned as belonging to the town.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY,

ON THE GLASGOW AND SOUTH-WESTERN LINE.

CARRIER.

To GLASGOW, George Crawford, Tuesday and Friday

GALSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GALSTON is a parish of 15,213 acres in the district of Kyle-Stewart. The town is eligibly situated on the left bank of the Irvine, on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, and from Dumfries to Glasgow; it is 22 s. from the latter city, 16 N.N.E. from Ayr, and five E. from Kilmarnock; seated in a hallow, sheltered on all sides by rising grounds. The industrious classes are chiefly employed in weaving and the manufacture of lace. There is a corn mill, and one for paper mill boards—the latter erected early in the fifteenth century. Another occupation is also presented to the labouring classes, that of raising coal, of which a large quantity is obtained from the estates of the Duke of Portland, who is superior of the parish. There are excellent schools. Blair's school occupies a handsome building, opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair, Esq., of Galston, who bequeathed certain heritable property, which was to accumulate until the income amounted to £200 per annum. This has now been considerably increased, through which 120 children of either sex are educated and clothed for a term of four years. Under the Endowment Act it is now incorporated with the public schools. There are likewise four Sabbath evening schools, wherein upwards of 500 children receive instruction. There is an excellent institution, which was erected in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, given by Miss Brown, of Laufine, and is called Brown's Institute. It consists of a spacious reading room, well supplied with the daily newspapers, periodicals, &c.; a library, containg between 2,000 and 3,000 volumes; and some recreation rooms for various kinds of amusement.

The places of worship are an Established church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and a United Presbyterian church, of Gothic architecture, which cost about £1,100. The Roman Catholics have now a beautiful place of worship, dedicated to St. Sophia, which was opened in December, 1886. The style of architecture is strictly Byzantine, Dr. R. Rowland Anderson, of Edinburgh, being the architect. This edifice is the munificent gift of Lord Bute, and has already cost upwards of £10,000. A presbytery is now in course of erection adjoining the church. For the Free Church congregation a handsome structure, built of red sandstone, with a Gothic front, has this year (1888) been erected, the cost, amounting to about £2,500, being defrayed partly by subscription and partly by a grant from the Ferguson Bequest fund. The architect was Mr. J. B. Wilson, of Glasgow. The parish extends about 13 miles in length, by four to five in breadth, lying in the upper part of the county, contiguous to Lanarkshire, and separated by the Irvine from the parish of Loudoun on the north, Mauchline and Sorn bounding it on the south. The surface is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine and the river Avon, which rises in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a large and magnificent structure in the modern castellated style; this, together with the old castle o' Cessnock and Barr, surrounded as they are by natural and artificial woods, highly enhance the beauty of the district, in which is also Patie's Mill, celebrated in the delightful song called "The Lass of Patie's Mill." The annual fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, the first Thursday in June, and the last Wednesday in November. Population of the parish in 1881, 5,961; of which number the town contained 4,085.

POST OFFICE, GALSTON, Matthew Robertson, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Kilmarnock), at 6 10 and 7 50 a.m and 5 50 p.m., and are despatched thereto at 9 35 a m. and 3 15, 6 20 and 8 45 p.m. Sunday 12 noon only.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

GIRVAN AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GIRVAN is a parish of 14,580 acres, in the district of Carrick. The town, a burgh of barony, is 90 miles W.S.W. of Edinburgh, 56 S.W. of Glasgow, 35 N.N.W. of Portpatrick, 31 N.N.E. of Stanraer, 21 S. by W. of Ayr, 13 N. by E. of Ballantrae, 12 S.S.W. of Maybole, and six S.W. of Dailly, situated on the left bank of the Garvan or Girvan, near to its influx with the sea, and at a point of exactly opposite the islet called AILSA CRAIG. This rock, which is 11 miles distant, rises out of the Firth of Clyde, to the height of 1,075 feet. It is two and a half miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, ferns, and other plants, which feed great numbers of goats and rabbits. All around, on the precipitous sides of the rock, uniformly nestle almost inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins, and gannets, which flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace or shoulder, of the craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Higher up issue two sparkling and beautiful springs of water, one of which forms a marshy plain, covered with various plants, amongst others the hydrocatile vulgaris, of extraordinary magnitude. The rock (which is in the parish of Dailly) belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa, who draws from it a yearly rental of £30, which is paid by the feathers of the fowls and the rabbit skins. Naturalists and botanists would find a visit of value, in increasing their knowledge of the vegetable world. The harbour of Girvan, which underwent considerable improvements in 1869-70, and still further and more extensive in 1881-83, at the expense of the Harbour Commissioners, is now considered safe and convenient for shipping. Large quantities of grain of various kinds are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The steamer "Loch Etive" carries goods to and from Glasgow weekly. The trade in coal and lime is important—the mines of the former and the quarries of the latter being numerous in the neighbourhood. Formerly the chief business of the town consisted in the manufacture of a variety of cotton and woollen goods for the Glasgow and Paisley markets, which then afforded employment to the bulk of the inhabitants; the principal trade of the place now is herring fishing, which occurs twice a year, beginning in December and May. The government of the town is vested in two bailies and twelve councillors, three of the latter being chosen annually, on the retirement or otherwise of the like number, on the 12th of October; the Countess of Stair is the superioress of the borough. Girvan is a station on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway. In October, 1871, a new line of railway was commenced, called the Girvan and Portpatrick line. It is 31¼ miles in length, and was opened in 1876, and greatly facilitates commerce between Glasgow and the North of Ireland.

The places of worship are as follows, viz.—Two churches of the Establishment, one for United Presbyterians, a Free church, and one each for Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, and Wesleyan Methodists. The Episcopalian church is a neat structure of Gothic architecture, the interior being beautifully decorated; it has also a very commanding pulpit, and was erected at a cost of £1,100. The M'Kechnie Institute, erected at the corner of Dalrymple street and Ailsa street, was the gift of the late Mr. Thomas M'Kechnie, in memory of his deceased brother, R. M'Kechnie, and himself. The building, which consists of library, ladies' and gentlemen's reading rooms, smoking and committee rooms, is of red sandstone from the famous Ballochmyle Quarries, the architects being Messrs. M'Kissack and Rowan, of Glasgow. It was completed in July, 1888, the cost being about £3,000. To the parochial school, which is now under a parish School Board, a valuable donation was made by the late Mrs. Crawford, of Ardmillan, who left the interest of £1,000 for ever to the teachers, for the education of forty children, subject only to the deduction of two guineas, to be distributed in small prizes amongst the pupils. The same munificent lady left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 is given to the precentor of the church, for the instruction of ten of the children in sacred music, and the balance to be divided among the poor householders not receiving parochial relief. There are also two other schools here under the burgh School Board, one of which was built in 1875, at a cost of £3,500, for 550 scholars. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the first Mondays in April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business. Population of Girvan in 1871, 4,791, and in 1881, 4,505, and of the parish, 5,480.

POST OFFICE, Dalrymple Street, John M'Kenna, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at 8 a.m.; from England, Ireland, Glasgow, and Ayr at 10 20 a.m.; and from all parts at 5 40 p.m.; and are despatched to Ballantrae, Colmonell, Barr, Barrhill and Daljarrock at 7 20 a.m.; to Ayr and the North at 8 30 a.m.; to Glasgow and all parts at 12 35 p.m.; to England (direct) and all parts at 2 40 p.m and 5 35 p.m.; and to England and all parts (via Glasgow) at 9 30 p.m. On Sunday there is one despatch at 6 p.m.——Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

IRVINE,

WITH THE PARISH OF DREGHORN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

IRVINE, the most ancient royal burgh in Scotland, is the seat of a presbytery, and as regards population and importance, the second town in the district of Cunninghame. The town is agreeably situated on rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the Garnock water and the sea, and upon the line of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is distant from Edinburgh 67 miles W.S.W., 25 S.S.W. of Glasgow, 11 N. of Ayr, 11 S. of Beith, and 7 W. of Kilmarnock. Irvine unites with Ayr, and with Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Oban in Argyleshire, in returning one member to Parliament, who is styled the member for the Ayr Burghs; the present representative is John Sinclair, Esq. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and eleven councillors. A bailie court is held every lawful day, as business may require; and one for the recovery of small debts and for the trial of criminal cases before the justices, is also held every Monday. The Dean of Guild Court is held on Tuesday. A sheriff court is held every alternate month. There are several commodious inns, the King's Arms and the Eglinton Arms, High street, for commercial or posting purposes, are both well worthy of support. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Tuesday in May, and on the third Monday in August commences the Marymass fair. Formerly the first four days of the week were set apart as fairs, each for some particular goods and merchandise. Marymass Monday was at one time an important wool fair; now the horse market on Wednesday is the principal part of the fair, which is still well attended. The Marymass races are held on the Saturday following the third Monday of August, and the Eglinton Hunt Meeting (over Bogside course) generally in the beginning of April. The Town Moor forms an excellent camping ground for the annual training of the 4th Battalion Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Renfrew Militia), detachments of Royal Artillery occasionally, and the Lanarkshire Volunteer Artillery. The question as to whether Irvine or Barry, on the east cost of Scotland, should be selected as the site for the Scottish National Camp of Instruction for Artillery Volunteers, has recently agitated the Artillery Volunteer regiments in Scotland, and is considered still so far open. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, stands within two miles of the burgh, and is famous in connection with the grand tournament held here in 1839. The noble earl permits the greatest freedom of access to the grounds and gardens; admission, however, is only obtainable by ticket, which may be had from Mr. C. Murchland, publisher, Irvine.

The situation of the town is dry and healthy, being altogether of a sandy bottom. All the streets are broad and airy. The old steeple, with court house, council chambers, and gaol, that occupied the centre of the main street, have been removed. The new municipal buildings, including council chambers, court house, &c. which have been erected from a beautiful design, form an elegant structure, and are much admired. The parish church is a handsome building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on rising ground, n the centre of the churchyard. The other places of worship are a Free church, two for United Presbyterians, one for Roman Catholics, and one for Baptists, all situated in the burgh proper. At the north end of the town an academy, surrounded by extensive play-grounds, was erected in 1814, at an expense of £2,250, of which sum the burgh paid £1,633, and the remainder was made up by public subscription. A royal charter was obtained for the proper establishment and government of this institution, which is an honour and ornament to Irvine. Many students who have eminently distinguished themselves at the Scotch and English Universities were educated here. The rector has a staff of male and female teachers under him, by whom are taught Latin, Greek, the modern languages, mathematics, and drawing, besides the usual branches of education. Many valuable prizes are awarded at the annual examinations; and recently the sum of £1,000 was left to this institution by John Ferguson, Esq., of Cairnbrock, the interest of which is proposed to be given annually in bursaries, at the disposal of his trustees. The pupils attending this academy have been particularly successful in carrying off the first bursaries and prizes at Glasgow College. Besides private ladies' seminaries of a superior class, there are the public and industrial schools and Board schools. There is also a Literary and Social Institute, well provided with reading and recreation rooms, and a large hall for public meetings and entertainments. The Templars' Hall here was the first erection of its kind in Scotland; there is also an Orange and Protestant Hall. The other principal erections are the Royal, Clydesdale, and Union Banks, all handsome architectural buildings. The grain stores of J. F. Longmuir & Co. are extensive and substantial structures, and are, perhaps, the largest in Cunninghame. Coal pits have been successfully sunk in the burgh land.

On the south side of the river, but connected with the town by a fine stone bridge of four arches, is an extensive suburb called FULLARTON, but in the parish of Dundonald. It abuts on the Frith of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay, and contains a shipbuilding yard, three steam sawmills, naphtha works, two iron forges, and two large engineering and foundry yards. Four large chemical and chrome works have been erected near the beach, which give employment to nearly 1,000 men. The British Dynamite Company (now Nobel's Explosives Co. Limited), have also erected works on the north side of the river. The harbour has been much improved, at very considerable expense, and the trade has in consequence greatly increased, especially in the export of coal. The places of worship in Fullarton district of the burgh are the Free and the Established churches. In 1881 an Act of Parliament was obtained for extending the boundaries of the burgh, and for other purposes. By this act Fullarton, sometimes called the Halfway, was amalgamated with the burgh, so that the whole town is now under the jurisdiction of the municipality. Some years ago the local authorities of the burgh of Irvine and the parish of Dundonald combined in promoting a scheme for supplying the town with gravitation water, and in August, 1878, the water was introduced. Arrangements have since been made for giving supplies of water to the towns of Kilwinning, Stevenston and Saltcoats, from the Irvine Water Works, which were, by the Irvine Burgh Act, 1881, transferred to the Corporation. About £70,000 has been expended on their construction, and the further extensions of the works now projected will cost about £5,000 additional.

Irvine is a borough of great antiquity; the beginning of Irvine is the very beginning of history. Before Robert the Bruce was, before Sir William Wallace was, during the time of William the Lion, it is supposed that there was a "town" called Irvine. The earliest mention of Irvine is contained in the account of a dispute between Sir Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine, and somewhere towards the close of the twelfth century a charter was given to it. During the time of Alexander II. a charter existed, which was confirmed by Robert the Bruce. From another similar document, it appears the burgesses were in possession of the entire barony of Cunninghame and Largs. The first great event in its history was the foundation of the convent or monastery of the Carmelites, about 1300. The sect of the Buchanites had also its origin in Irvine; and it is recorded that in 1618 four women were executed in one day, and in the month of March, 1640, there were twelve women executed in Irvine for the crime of witchcraft, and fifty years afterwards one women was severely punished for acting as a spaewife for the recovery of stolen goods. From 1618 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson, the minister who connected Glasgow with Irvine, eminent as a divine, and author of a poem that moved life in the memory of religious men. He left Irvine to fill the office of principal of Glasgow University. A few years ago the manse he occupied at Porthead (corner of Kirk vennel) was taken down in the course of street improvements. On 31st December, 1666, Blackwood and M'Coul, two covenanters, were hanged at Irvine for being at Pentland. William Sutherland, the hangman of Irvine, refused to execute these men. Irvine is also the birthplace of James Montgomery, author of "The World before the Flood," &c., but more widely known as the author of the hymn commencing "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," and many other sacred poems; he is generally styled "the Christian Poet." He was born 4th November, 1771, in a little back dwelling still standing in the street leading to the railway station. This property was some time ago purchased by some enthusiastic members of the Irvine Burns' club with the view of preserving it. A tablet has been recently placed on the building, marking it as the birthplace of Montgomery. In 1841 he visited his native town, and was received withe very mark of respect. In this town Burns, Scotland's national poet, served his time as a flax dresser, and the house in which he wrote, and was burnt out of, is still pointed out to strangers. John Galt, author of the "Annals of the Parish," &c., was born at Irvine, on 2nd of May, 1779; the house then occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858, and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site; a neat tablet in the Bank office commemorates this circumstance. Here was invented the screw propellor so early as 1824 or 1825, by Messrs. W. M'Cririck, Maxwell Dick, and James Steadman. Population of the town in 1871, 6,886, and in 1881, 8,517.

KILBIRNIE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KILBIRNIE, or KILBURNEY, is a populous village in that parish, district of Cunninghame, 64 miles W. by S. from Edinburgh, 20 S.S.W. of Glasgow, the like distance N. of Ayr, and 3 W. from Beith; eligibly situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirnie, which extends two miles in length by half a mile in breadth. The importance of this village has been greatly augmented by the flax spinning, linen thread, and fishing-net works of Messrs. W. & J. Knox. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, is established here. Glengarnock Iron Works is an extensive concern for the manufacture of pig iron and basic steel, situated about a mile and a quarter to the south-east of Kilbirnie. These works, which employ about 2,000 persons, including those engaged in raising coal for the use of the furnaces, are superintended by Mr. Robert Main, the acting manager. The workmen inhabit a newly erected village, and are conveniently supplied with the necessaries required from a store, at market prices. A large number of hands are also employed at the factory of Messrs. Paton, Brown & Co., near to the Kilbirnie railway station, manufacturers of winceys, flannel shirtings, skirtings, &c. Kilbirnie is also noted for its manufacture of fishing nets, by machinery, six firms being now engaged in this trade. There are also two rope works, belonging respectively to Messrs. Robertson & Riddet, and J. Watt & Co. The station is about a mile and a half distant, at Glengarnock, but a new branch from the joint line at Barmill, on the Caledonian and South-Western joint line to Kilmarnock, is now in course of construction, the terminus to which will be in the village at Bridgend. It is expected to be open for traffic about the end of this year (1888).
